AT ODDS OVER TARIFF
Attack on Rawleigh, LaFol-

BY WILLIAM HARD

Washington (CFA) — Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor and chairman of America's Wage Earners' Protective conference, famed for his high-tariff influence in the course of the enactment of the present tariff law and still more famed for his recent efforts to exclude from the United States virtually all products of Soviet Russia, is now charged by northwestern insurgent Republican elements with having undertaken to defeat Philip LaFollette for the Republican nomination for governor in Wisconsin. This is called a move toward weakening and destroying the titular crown prince of all northwestern insurgency, Senator Robert Marion LaFollette the younger, who gave to the present tariff law in the senate on roll-call an emphatic "nay."

The charge arises out of articles circulated through the trade union press of the United States by the International Labor News service, of which Mr. Woll is president, attacking the labor record of W. T. Rawleigh, prominent manufacturer and tariff reformer of Freeport, Ill., who was the principal campaign contributor to the presidential endeavors of the Senator LaFollette in 1924. Mr. Woll has been continuously a financial mainstay of LaFollette political and legislative activities. These articles in criticism of Mr. Rawleigh have accused him of maintaining anti-union open-shop conditions in his vast plant at Freeport and in effect have classified him as an enemy to "labor" with the implication that candidates to whom he gives his support would properly fall under labor suspicion. That implication is strenuously resented by LaFollette advocates who heartily assail Mr. Woll and his associates in the American Federation of Labor as traitors to the progressive labor cause.

The LaFolletteites stand by Mr. Rawleigh strongly. Their Madison publication called "The Progressive," which has succeeded to the ownership and circulation of "LaFollette's Magazine," calls Mr. Rawleigh a "public benefactor" and gives him amply earned credit for being about

2 Men Killed
By Explosion
In Elevator

Minneapolis (AP) — An explosion in an old grain elevator turned it into a towering torch sending two workers to their deaths early today. Fire broke out immediately after the explosion sending a blue flame high in the air and scattering debris over a large area. It was impossible to effect a rescue of the two men and members of their families living nearby stood in the crowd as firemen sought to extinguish the blaze which did damage of $100,000. One body, which could not be identified had been found at noon, while search continued for the second.

The dead: Philip Olson, 32, and Harold Barnett, 25. When the explosion occurred the two men had almost completed their first shift on new assignments as machine operators. The cause of the explosion was not definitely determined but was believed to have resulted either from spontaneous combustion or as a result of a small fire originating in the machinery. The structure was known as the W. P. Devereaux company elevator, but was operated by the E. F. Carlson company.

LEGUIA TO BE DELIVERED TO
NEW REGIME

Head of Military Junta
Promises to Try Former Chief for "Misdeeds"

BULLETIN
Washington (AP) — The state department today instructed the American embassy at Lima, Peru to "take all appropriate measures" to effect the release of Harold E. Grow.

Lima (AP) — Official announcement was made today that the cruiser Almirante Grau, on which is quartered former President Augusto B. Leguia, "has surrendered." Presumably, the Almirante Grau will deliver the former president to the new military junta in Lima, following requests by students that Leguia be prosecuted for his "misdeeds."

Yielding to popular clamor General Manuel Maria Ponce, head of the military junta which has replaced the old government, promised a mob of students in a public address that Leguia would be brought back to Lima to face punishment for his "misdeeds."

The Almirante Grau, Peruvian cruiser on which Leguia and his family yesterday left Callao, presumably for Panama, put back in of San Lorenzo Isle, outside Callao harbor, to await orders for disposition of their prisoner. Unverified reports from Callao, said he was seriously ill.

Martial law prevails in the capital as a consequence of fighting in the streets and at the home of the former president yesterday. Several persons were killed and injured.

A complicating factor has arisen in what may signify a break between the military junta in charge here and the southern, or Arequipa revolutionary group, headed by Colonel Sanchez Cerro. Many believe Colonel Sanchez Cerro will refuse to recognize the authority of the Lima junta and will insist upon validity of the government he has installed at Arequipa.

General Ponce's promise to punish Leguia was made after an imposing popular display in the course of which a mob led by students gathered outside the government palace and demanded to see the junta leader.

CHARGE FUND MISUSE
A student committee was sent inside and Daniel Carneiro, its leader, told Ponce that Leguia should be held along with other politicians of the defunct regime who had "misused the public funds" to answer for their crimes.

General Ponce replied that the junta had decided to punish all the

MAYOR EXONERATES
EVANSTON CHIEF

Freeman to Keep Post
Despite $300 Loan from Slain Gangster

Evanston, Ill. (AP) — Chief of Police William O. Freeman was exonerated by Mayor Charles H. Bartlett last night from blame in borrowing $300 from Jack Zuta, slain Chicago vice lord and gang chieftain.

A letter requesting the loan was found in one of Zuta's deposit boxes. After the disclosure, Freeman told investigators that he wanted the money to retire a judgment against his house. The police chief said he paid the money back.

Mayor Bartlett made known his decision after a recent session of the Evanston city council.

"I knew of Freeman's financial condition at the time he borrowed the money from Zuta," the mayor said. "I found it was used legitimately to pay off a judgment."

Mayor Bartlett said that "this is not a whitewash but an investigation into Chief Freeman's integrity, honesty and efficiency. For that reason, I am retaining him for the remainder of my term and the remainder of my term."

Freeman said he requested a loan from "a big man in Chicago" and that he was then referred to the vice overlord, who was slain in a Wisconsin resort a month ago.

MANY HURT IN ACCIDENT
AS FRENCH LAUNCH SHIP

Havre, France (AP) — The 400-foot torpedo boat Vautour slipped on its ways during its launching here today and in a wild stampede to get out of its way many persons in the large crowd witnessing the christening ceremonies were injured.

The 2,400-ton ship, one of the finest units in the new French fleet, slid about 200 feet down the ways. Suddenly it swung about as if on a pivot and when two thirds of the hull hit the water.

The bow of the Vautour remained in the cradle, high in the air. Intense excitement spread throughout the crowd which dashed in all directions. Scores were bruised but officials said none had been seriously injured.

BOARD VOTES
$25,000 TO
FIGHT SNOW

Purchase of More Snow
Fence, Tractor and Plow,
Two Trucks Approved

Outagamie county board of supervisors Tuesday morning adopted a resolution submitted by the county highway committee appropriating $25,000 for purchase of snow removal equipment and snow fences.

The appropriation is expected to enable the committee to buy two carloads of snow fence, a new tractor and plow, part of the purchase price to be offset by sale of two old Monarch tractors, and two new trucks equipped with plows.

The new equipment will be added to the highway committee's fleet of eight FWD trucks, one Oshkosh four wheel drive truck, one Weidman truck, and one Mack truck. Besides the trucks the county also has three tractors ready for snow removal.

Tuesday's meeting was a special session called to pass on reports and routine matters. It adjourned at noon, the cost of the meeting being $273.64 or $58.64 over the cost of an ordinary one day session.

TRANSFER FUND
Practically all business approved by the board was on highway matters. A fund of $2,500 was transferred from the general fund to the highway department to pay county motorcycle officers and the finance committee was instructed to set aside a fund for the officers when they draw up the 1931 budget in November.

The board accepted a report on the miles of paved roads in the county and the work done and money expended on county roads during the summer months.

A resolution asking the highway committee to request state aid in repaving country trunk E in the village of Little Chute was approved, as was another requesting that the gap of unpaved highway on highway 25 between Hortonville and Greenville be paved.

Warning that the bridge over the Fox river at Kimberly is in bad condition was given the board by Joseph Doerflinger, village president, who said state highway department representatives now were making an inspection and soon would have a report ready.

REPORT ON FUNDS
A report on balances in funds of the county highway department as of Aug. 25 was accepted. There is a deficit of $1,831.84 in the county garage fund and one of $22,715.57 in the county machinery fund.

The latter deficit will be wiped out, however, by transfer of a fund of $24,133.04 in revenue acquired from use of county machinery during the last six months. A resolution approving the transfer was adopted by the board.

The state patrol maintenance fund shows a balance of $16,736.95, while other fund balances follow:

County patrol maintenance $26,691.01; and wall removal $236; snow removal $175.67; road construction $3,324.50; bridge construction on (Lafayette) bridge, Kaukauna $10,000; county and town and bridge, $1,522.97; county and town and construction $5,024.02; town roads and village streets (gas tax) $2,426.50; emergency road and bridge fund $10,754.54.

A resolution asking that the sanatorium road be scraped and leveled was referred to the county highway committee. The county poor committee was given permission to attend a meeting of the Association for Public Relief in Milwaukee Sept. 16 and 17.

Every county agent on record as recommending action of the Elk club in donating a table and table and chairs to the sanatorium. To purchase of the 41 numbers of the board attended the meeting.

Duke Weds,
Yields Hope
For Kingdom

Brighton, Eng. (AP) — The mystery surrounding the marriage of Archduke Albrecht of Hungary was cleared with the announcement today that he was wedded to Madame Rudnay, former wife of a Hungarian diplomat, here on Aug. 16 before Registrar Burfield.

Local records show that the Archduke was here, residing at a local hotel for a fortnight previous to his marriage and that Madame Rudnay was here also. Other details of the ceremony were lacking.

To make the Hungarian divorcee his wife the archduke was obliged to renounce all his titles and privileges as a member of the Hapsburg family.

Prince Otto, now the only hope of the Hungarian legitimists, was said to have bestowed the title of Countess Lovary upon the bride of Albrecht, who was known also as Irene Leitch, a commoner.

Previous reports had fixed the date of Albrecht's marriage as July 26, and the scene a London registry office.

The registrar said the former Hungarian royal heir and his companion made a very unpretentious appearance. He said the bride wore only a simple walking dress and the archduke ordinary morning attire. Their identity, during two weeks at a seaside hotel, never was revealed to the outside world.

Both spoke very good English, Burfield said, and after the ceremony Albrecht dined with the registrar and thanked him.

The archduke's lawyer was M. B. Dikovics. The couple returned to their hotel after the marriage.

ANEMIA FATAL
AT HOSPITAL
ON WEST COAST

Hemorrhage of Lungs Cuts
Short Courageous Battle
Against Disease

KNOWN AS MYSTERY MAN
"Man of Thousand Faces"
Seldom in Limelight
Aside from Pictures

Los Angeles (AP) — Lon Chaney, whose grotesque screen characterizations won him the sobriquet of "the man of a thousand faces," died here at 12:55 a. m. today after a valiant battle against anemia and congestion of the bronchial tubes.

A hemorrhage of the lungs shortly after midnight suddenly cut short the noted actor's fight for life after he had been reported on the road to recovery. He was 47 years old.

Chaney entered a hospital Aug. 15, for treatment of an anemic condition resulting from a severe attack of pneumonia suffered in New York early this year. He failed to respond readily to treatment and last week three blood transfusions were resorted to. Last Saturday he became critically ill but safely passed the crisis. Yesterday he was said by hospital attaches to be resting easily.

The hemorrhage which resulted in Chaney's death struck him unexpectedly and suddenly. He was dead in less than 30 minutes, his physicians said.

At Chaney's bedside was Mrs. Chaney, a constant attendant since her husband first was taken ill, and Creighton Chaney, a son by a former marriage.

TRUE MYSTERY MAN
The death of Chaney removes from Hollywood's varied ranks a veritable mystery man, known almost entirely by his screen appearances. Away from the screen, Chaney in private life was a quiet, unassuming man, dark glasses and plain clothes. He commanded a large salary, made numerous investments and reputedly was wealthy, but made few friends.

Born on April 1, 1883, at Colorado Springs, Colo., the son of deaf and dumb parents, Chaney quit school before he had reached the fifth grade to become a tourist's guide on Pike's peak.

His introduction to the theatre was as a property boy. Later he became a stage hand, and to his death he carried a card in a stage hand's organization. Behind the wings he studied the regular actors and learned without a teacher the fine points of acting which later in life won him fame. He got his first "break" as a song and dance man at a stage hands' benefit when he was 16 years old.

With his brother, George, who now lives in Oakland, Calif., Chaney drifted into the wandering life of a "chance" actor and toured the country. While with the old Hartmann Opera company in San Francisco he met and married Hazel Hastings, a member of the troupe, who was his companion for 22 years. Of a previous marriage little is known except that a son was born.

FIRST LEAD IN 1914
Chaney's entrance into the motion picture world was via the stagecoach route but in 1912 he became an extra in western films. Later he directed films, wrote screenplays, and acted in several productions. He received his first screen credit in 1914 from Universal for appearance in a leading role in "Hill Moran's Girls."

With his portrayal of "The Frog" in the "Miracle Man" came Chaney's shift from slapstick and westerns to the grotesque characterizations that made him famous. Early this year he signed a five year contract. The "grotesques" name of many actors and actresses were no terms to him. He was a "grotesque" comedian.

With his portrayals of grotesque characters, Chaney himself slipped into a condition that well might have fitted in with the life of some of his screen characterizations. He refused interviews—"none of the public's interest," he would say. He refused to attend premier showings. After studio hours he sought the seclusion of his home and his small circle of close friends. Among his close acquaintances were General Snodgrass, Buster Keaton, United States marines, and Eddie Griffin, the comedian.

EDUCATED HIMSELF
Wholly self-educated, he was a voracious reader and a student of many subjects. He wrote the Encyclopedia Britannica's chapter on screen makeup. Though often portraying the cripple or deformed character, Chaney off the lot was athletic and strong. His hobbies were fishing, football and prize fighting.

From the list of starring vehicles Chaney has appeared in outstanding were "The Miracle Man," "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," "Phantom of the Opera," "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," and "The Unholy Three." No sacrifice was too great for the actor to undergo if it meant the better his portrayal and frequently he suffered painfully while the camera gazed away.

Find Missing Indiana Girl And Arrest Her Kidnaper

PAIR LOCATED BY OFFICERS NEAR ELKHORN

Chicagoans See Man and Young Girl and Notify Badger Authorities

Valparaiso, Ind. — (AP) — Ten-year-old Betty Jane Foster returned unharmed to her home today and the man who held her captive for two days was placed in jail.

The two were found near Elkhorn, Wis., yesterday, ending a man hunt that spread into three states and engaged hundreds of men.

The capture was the result of an automobile chase, but Claude Dillner, 27-year-old farm hand, made resistance when he was finally stopped. The man, described by officers as partly demented, admitted his identity and said he took the girl from her home Saturday because he "just fell in love with her."

Betty Jane said Dillner had treated her all right except that he locked her in his battered car whenever he left it.

The posses that searched for the two in this vicinity and later near Elkhorn had feared to find the girl dead. Dillner, it was noted, was the child's father, Ernest Foster, that he would will her if police were notified of the kidnapping.

The girl said she slept each night in the locked car, parked at the side of a road, while Dillner went in the woods nearby.

LOOKED FOR WORK

Saturday night was spent in Dillner's car "near Chicago," he said, and then he drove to Whitewater, Wis., where he expected to obtain work with a contractor friend. The friend, he learned, was in Lake Geneva and the couple camped at Lake Como Sunday night prior to going to Lake Geneva. Two vacationing Chicagoans saw them and notified authorities of their suspicions.

The Fosters, wealthy farmers, were so overcome with joy and excitement that they found it impossible to go to Elkhorn to bring their daughter back, sending a neighbor to accompany Sheriff Barney Maxwell.

The sheriff said the charges filed against Dillner would probably be kidnapping.

Dillner told the officers he deserted from the U. S. S. Tennessee in 1927 and came to Indiana where he worked on the Foster farm. He said he watched Betty Jane grow up and learned to love her, that he had planned for some time on returning and taking her away with him to live as his daughter.

He wanted to take Betty Jane west and give her a good home," he said.

KOHLER OBSERVES FIRES FROM PLANE

Governor and Newspaper Men Fly Over Burning Areas in State

Hayward — (AP) — Governor Walter J. Kohler of Wisconsin turned forestry observer yesterday afternoon, and following a flight over the burning area in northeast Wisconsin issued the following statement:

"This morning we flew for more than an hour over the Marengo forest fire district. With me were two newspaper men: Mr. W. B. Fooms of the Ashland Daily Press and Mr. H. Griffin of Madison; and the Wisconsin chief forest fire warden, S. G. Wilson.

"While the air was very smoky at altitudes of 2,000 to 3,000 feet, we experienced no discomfort. I am told that most of the fires, which are checked, and the Marengo fire, burning for 10 days, now are practically under control.

"The fire area is confined to the Bad River Indian reservation in Ashland county. There are no roads in to the territory, which is burning and long, continued drought has made the fire particularly menacing.

"The territory has once before been burned over, but a cyclone a few years ago leveled many trees, causing much inflammable debris.

"Visible from the sky were many gullies, which usually are wet, but now are exceptionally dry, increasing the difficulty.

"Since Monday of last week the fire fighters have plowed up about five miles of fire lane, permitting backfires. The Marengo and Bad Rivers are used for pumping water when the fire is close enough to make them available. The village of Marengo is in no immediate danger.

"The Ashland county highway organization and the DuSable, South Shore and Atlantic railways have cooperated splendidly in fighting the fires. John B. Chapple, managing editor of the Ashland Press, who has a lane chartered is placing it at the disposal of workers.

"This indicates the importance of visual view of the scene.

"County Highway Commissioner W. E. Diefel of Ashland has called a protection meeting to which railroad companies, utilities, newspapermen and people holding large wooded tracts have been asked. This meeting will be of tremendous value to Wisconsin in the study and solution of this most difficult, menacing problem."

MARRIAGE LICENSES

Marriage licenses have been issued by John E. Hantschel, county clerk, to Raymond Kunzman, Seymour, and Hildegard Hein, Appleton; George J. Besham and Mrs. Lulu Kubitz, both of Appleton; and Richard Kamkes and Bernice Selig, both of Appleton.

"About one-third of the population of DuSable, Okla., attends Sunday school regularly."

COMMISSION HAS $10,000,000 BUT CANNOT SPEND IT

Washington — (AP) — The Interstate Commerce commission has $10,000,000 in its railroad contingent fund but is unable to use a cent of it at the present time.

This amount has been collected from prosperous roads earning more than 6 per cent on their investment under the provisions of the 1920 Railway Transportation act. The fund was intended to be loaned to weaker roads but this has been barred by Comptroller General McCarl until the commission fixes a valuation of the railroads upon which the earnings are determined. Under a tentative valuation, the money has been collected from the prosperous railroads, but in nearly every case has been paid under protest. McCarl ruled that none of the money should be used pending a final valuation.

Since Jan. 1 the commission has been busily engaged in valuation work and the value of some of the roads is expected to be decided next winter. As quickly as the valuation of individual railroads is completed any money they have paid into the contingent fund would become available for less profitable roads.

The Railway Transportation act provided that all roads earning more than 6 per cent must pay half of the excess into the contingent fund and keep the other half as a reserve fund until it equals 5 per cent of the railroad's value.

CANADIAN SHIPS PLYING ALL OVER WORLD THESE DAYS

Government Has Expanded Mercantile Marine in Last Few Years

BY J. C. ROYLE

Copyright, 1930, by Cline Press

Montreal — With ships plying to every important port in the world, Canada's mercantile development during the past year has been almost phenomenal when it is considered that only a few years ago merely a few set routes were covered with cargoes from the dominion.

Through extension of the Canadian government mercantile marine there has been a marked activity in trade between the dominion and the British West Indies and coupled with this, the inauguration of the Canadian National Steamship "Lady" boats, such as the Lady Nelson and Lady Rodney, on the West Indies run; real progress has been made in foreign trade.

One feature of Canada's marine program this year is the increase in coastal traffic and the added facilities given those who seek to travel to Europe via the St. Lawrence river. This is a popular route for passengers from the United States. Ocean going ship arrivals in Montreal this season, however, show a decline of eighty thousand tons.

The reduced movement of grain accounts for most of this decline. Shipments have fallen off 20,000,000 bushels from last season, during recent months.

FREIGHT TRAFFIC UP

Apart from the question of grain shipments, the freight traffic has been well maintained, and whereas formerly the port of Montreal considered it extraordinary to have ships from distant ports, now vessels arriving from Egypt or Turkey are a common sight. Montreal has spent millions during the past four or five years on port facilities so that the city is equipped to handle the largest liners.

A Vancouver similar improvement has been made in order to accommodate the new grain passenger liners that are now plying between that port and the Orient. Private steamship companies are adding to their fleets both on the Atlantic and the Pacific and only lately the C. P. R.'s crack boats were sent to Quebec on her maiden voyage prior to going on the Pacific run. The Canadian Pacific is at present building even a larger ship and this, too, will go into service on the Pacific.

The Canadian National Steamships, government owned, now have boats plying to all parts of the world—Australia, Africa, the Orient and South America, all being on their routes. At present only freight is carried, with a few passengers, to these distant points, but within the next few years, speedy passenger service is expected to be developed in conjunction with the freight carrying.

Canada's position in the mercantile marine world is doubly enhanced because of the great fleets operating on the Great Lakes and if the St. Lawrence deep waterways project is finally sanctioned by the Canadian and United States governments, ocean going freight and passenger vessels will be in a position to journey as far west as Fort William and Port Arthur.

CHARGES KOHLER IS SPENDING HEAVILY TO RETAIN OFFICE

Representative Government Threatened by Big Expenditures—LaFollette

Clinton — (AP) — A charge that there is widespread evidence that Gov. Walter Kohler was attempting to secure the re-nomination by excessive expenditures was made by Sen. Robert M. LaFollette in a speech here today.

Sen. LaFollette has taken the stump on behalf of his brother, Philip, who is seeking the gubernatorial nomination.

"The very existence of representative government is threatened in this country today by the excessive and corrupt use of money in primaries and elections," the senator said. "Powerful interests, seeking special favors from government at the expense of mankind have been pouring millions of dollars into state, congressional and presidential campaigns for the purpose of preventing government to their selfish ends. The first gigantic attempt of these interests to purchase special favors from government in this century occurred in the presidential campaign of 1920.

"The pre-campaign campaign witnessed the outright purchase of delegates to the Republican National convention. It was in the back room conference in the Blackstone Hotel that the conspiracy was hatched to rob the nation of its naval officer reserves in exchange for the nomination of Warren G. Harding as president of the United States.

"Progressive Wisconsin recognized years ago that if democracy was to be preserved in this state that the excessive and corrupt use of money must be prevented. During the progressive administration of Governor Francis E. McGovern the Progressives enacted a corrupt practices act which guaranteed the integrity of our primaries and elections and preserved them inviolate from the vicious influences of excessive campaign expenditures until the primary of 1928.

"In that campaign a millionaire manufacturer surrounded and supported by the organized wealth of Wisconsin, expended $100,000 to secure the Republican nomination for governor. This sum was twenty-five times the legal amount permitted to be expended under the corrupt practices act.

"On every hand there is evidence that the same attempt to secure the re-nomination of the present governor by the excessive use of money which took place in 1928, is characterizing his campaign of 1930. Expensive banners which are appropriately suspended from the electric light poles in practically every city and village of Wisconsin, fire covers, expensive lithographs, tons of literature and hired workers, are being employed.

"This challenge to the people of Wisconsin to preserve the instrumentalities of democracy raises an issue that is greater than factional groups and lifts itself above party lines."

DIVA HURLS Flower Pot At Neighbor

Chicago — (AP) — Mme. Ada Pagli, singer with the Ravinia and Civic Opera companies, was fined $15 yesterday for the "pot" shot she took at a neighbor.

The shot—with a flower pot—was an unmistakable protest on the diva's part against band music played on the radio at 6 o'clock in the morning. It was also unmistakable evidence of a deadly aim.

Mme. Pagli, Magistrate Benjamin Meyer of Glenview was told, had long been irritated by the noisy music coming from the home of Otto and Walter Schultz in the early hours when the brothers were getting up and doing their calisthenics. She said she couldn't sleep with such an artistic din ringing in her ears.

Finally the temperament for which better of her and she let fly the first thing she found—a flower pot. The pot, Walter Schultz told the magistrate, sailed through a window and hit him on the head.

Since there is no law against band music and there is a law against throwing heavy objects through windows and against people's heads, the magistrate decided there was only one thing to do and he did it.

Miss Helen Wallis, welfare worker and field representative in the employ of the Children's Home and Aid society of Wisconsin, will have office hours in Appleton, at the Appleton Woman's club, from 8:30 to noon every Tuesday to take care of all children's welfare work in the city.

Miss Wallis was in Appleton Monday morning to confer with the recently organized local branch of the Children's Home and Aid society of Wisconsin. Mrs. M. T. Rae is temporary president of the group and Miss Orblison, secretary.

The stationing of Miss Wallis in Appleton on Tuesday is merely a means of facilitating the work which the welfare society has been carrying on in Appleton in the past, with funds provided by Appleton citizens. It is felt that a regular office period in the city will enable Miss Wallis to cover the field more efficiently.

The Children's Home and Aid society of Wisconsin is an agency licensed by the state board of control under the children's code to do child welfare work.

OIL OUTPUT SHOWS INCREASE FOR WEEK

Rocky Mountain and Oklahoma City Areas Reveal Largest Gains

Tulsa, Okla. — (AP) — Increased productions in the Oklahoma City and Rocky mountain fields led to a gain of 22,292 barrels in the estimated daily average output of oil in the United States for the week ended Aug. 23, the Oil and Gas Journal reported.

The country's daily average for the week was placed at 2,475,297 barrels, compared with 2,453,005 barrels for the week ended Aug. 16. Of the increase, 17,392 barrels was in light gravity oil.

In the Oklahoma City field production was estimated at 108,510 barrels, an increase of 27,593 barrels over the preceding week's while the Rocky mountain area showed a gain of 12,159 barrels with an output of 115,405 barrels. A series of new wells accounted for the Oklahoma pool's leap.

A decrease of 12,750 barrels was registered in California's light oil output, which was placed at 518,750 barrels, while that state's heavy oil production was given as 65,000 barrels, an increase of 1,500 barrels.

Production of the Midcontinent area, including both light and heavy oil, was totaled at 1,323,857 barrels, a gain of 18,953 over the preceding week. Oklahoma's output was 568,335 barrels, a 28,589 increase. With the exception of west Texas, which had a decline of 1,956 to 255,175 barrels production, the remaining Midcontinent fields displayed only slight shifts. Kansas' output was 114,550 barrels, an increase of 60 barrels.

Eastern production was figured at 120,000 barrels, or a decrease of 1,000 barrels.

BOARD HOLDS HEARING ON PAVING BENEFITS

A hearing on the assessment of benefits and damages for the paving of W. Washington-st., from Richmond-st. to Locust-st., was held by the board of public works at the city hall Monday afternoon. Only one property owner appeared, with the request that a durable pavement be selected. The paving will start the latter part of this week.

The board recommended the construction of a crown to provide better drainage, at the intersection of Memorial-dr. and Prospect-ave. While the street car tracks intersected at this corner it was necessary that the street have a flat surface, but now that the tracks are

THREE FOX TERRIERS ARE RESCUED FROM UNDERGROUND DRAIN

Berlin, Ill. — (AP) — Bob, Rezie and Prince, three of William Allen's fox terriers, were rescued last night from an underground drain in which they had been imprisoned for five days.

The dogs, with two others, ran into the tile while chasing a rabbit and were wedged in. The two smaller dogs, Sport and Queenie, got out after 24 hours, but the others could not move.

Allen started digging holes, five feet deep, down to the tile. Yesterday, on the tenth hole and a half mile from where the dogs entered the tile, he found them and pulled them out. They were weak from hunger and thirst but all recovered.

CALIFORNIA GOES TO POLLS TODAY FOR PRIMARY VOTE

Three Cornered Battle on in South California for Senatorial Seat

San Francisco — (AP) — A woman and a Democrat were among the five aspirants for the Republican nomination for governor, the chief contest in California's state primary elections today.

The woman, Mrs. Clara Shortridge Foltz, Los Angeles, sister of United States Senator Samuel Shortridge, made a quiet campaign. The chief interest centered about the three cornered fight featuring C. C. Young, incumbent, James Rolph, Jr., mayor of San Francisco, and Burton Fitts, district attorney at Los Angeles.

The Democrat, Milton K. Young, was also the sole Democratic candidate for the gubernatorial nomination. California's laws permitting an aspirant to seek nomination from more than one party.

Governor Young's adherents charged Young's name had been placed on the Republican ticket to confuse voters.

All of California's congressmen sought re-nomination. Clarence F. Lea, Santa Rosa, was the only Democrat among them.

Approximately three-fourths of the state's 2,000,000 registered voters are Republicans.

Socialists and Prohibitionists were in the field with tickets. Upton Sinclair, Pasadena, was a candidate for governor on the Socialist ticket.

FIGHT FOR BLEASE SEAT

Columbia, S. C. — (AP) — A three-cornered battle for the senatorial toga of Col. L. Blease, for years a political storm center, today intensified interest in South Carolina's Democratic primary. Eight contestants sought the governorship.

Observers generally conceded that today's voting merely would serve to eliminate all except two contestants in each of these races. A runoff primary will be held Sept. 2. Democratic nomination is equivalent to election in this state.

Senator Blease, active in South Carolina politics for 42 years, is opposed by Leon W. Harris, Anderson solicitor, and James F. Byrnes of Spartanburg, for 14 years a member of congress. Harris has attacked Blease's record.

Prohibition, the state's $65,000 highway bond issue and what has been termed by the candidates "honesty in government" have figured in the gubernatorial race.

Ashton H. Williams, young Florence attorney and former state senator, is running on an anti-out "wet" platform.

W. W. Smoak, collection legislator for the last 10 years, has argued vigorously against Williams' wet platform.

Olin D. Johnston, Spartanburg legislator; W. H. Keith, representative from Greenville, and John J. McMahon, former state insurance commissioner, and J. McMahon, former state insurance commissioner, have centered their attacks on the bond issue, the state highway department, and the administration of Governor Richards.

Other candidates are: Frank Lever, former congressman; R. Beverley Herbert, Columbia legislator, and Ira C. Blackwood, Spartanburg solicitor.

CIVIL WAR VETS FAIL TO DECIDE DISPOSAL OF FUND

G. A. R. Defers Action on $32,000 Until Next Year's Gathering

Cincinnati — (AP) — Disposal of a permanent fund of $32,000, a question that has been before the Grand Army of the Republic for five years, remained undecided today as the thinning line of Civil war veterans buckled down to the business sessions of their sixty-fourth annual encampment.

The problem of distributing the money after the last G. A. R. veteran has passed on, again was deferred another year, as the members decided the time was not ripe for such action. Numerous suggestions have been offered in the past, if the fund is not needed by members of the G. A. R. To this list has been added a suggestion to devote it to paying off indebtedness on Grant's tomb on Riverside drive, New York City, and to repair the tomb. Another is to erect a memorial to Clara Barton, whose efforts in behalf of Civil war veterans won her world-wide recognition.

Donations to the G. A. R. by affiliated organizations have been sufficient for several years to pay all operating expenses and the permanent fund has not been touched.

The "boys in blue" continued to arrive today, but indications were that hardly more than 1,000 would be here for the next major activity of the veterans, the annual parade, tomorrow. Only a few hundred had been registered today and Edwin J. Foster, commander-in-chief, said he did not expect more than 1,500 at the most.

Members of the affiliated organizations bring the attendance up to approximately 15,000.

The veterans were welcomed as the "survivors of the greatest epoch in American history" by Gov. Myers Y. Cooper at a public reception last night. "But for your achievement," he said, "Washington would have striven in vain, popular government would have died and the idealism which triumphed in the Spanish American and World wars would not have appeared in history and even-tuated in victory."

New Lines, Sober Colors Mark Women's Winter Coats

This is the second of six stories covering the field of feminine fashions for this fall and winter. This story deals with coats. Tomorrow daytime dresses.

BY ADELAIDE KERRY

New York — (AP) — The selection of Madame's winter coat is serious business this year. It's serious because colors are often sober and because around the coat's color scheme and design the American woman is going to build her winter wardrobe.

Coats have lost those box-like contours. Most of the new ones nip in at the waist a bit, they flare somewhat at the bottom, and their collars and cuffs are richly furled. They will enable madame to swish about with more elegance than she has had for several years.

Black is the favorite color, fashion leaders back from Paris say, tete-de-negre (dark brown) is a close second, then come bottle green and wine red. Black coats are generally furled in black, although beaver and similar furs may be used for the woman who prefers a harmonious contrast. Brown coats feature beaver and flat caracul trimmings, while the fur on dark green and red coats is often black.

"I've never seen so much black fur," says Miss Frances Cline, one of New York's leading couturiers. "They're using it everywhere, even on some of the white even wraps. Breitschwanz, Persian lamb, galayk and silver fox are all favorites.

"One of the most important notes on the winter models is the fact that they button. Women won't hold their coats around them this year as they've done for the last few seasons. They'll button them—and their hands will be free.

"The wool coat, richly trimmed, or the short fur coat, are going to be smarter this year than long fur coats. I believe. The longer dresses must flare a bit at the bottom to be graceful; coats follow the line—and when long fur coats are designed to flare they're apt to become cumbersome at the hem. Short fur coats, fitted a bit at the waist and reaching the hips, will be very smart, I think. With them large muffs will be carried."

Miss Cline believes the "sensible length" for formal daytime coats is five feet.

OFFICIALS TAKE INITIAL STEP TO ENROLL INDIANS

State Department Wants Children to Attend District Schools

The first big step toward enrolling Indians of the "Lost Tribe of the Chippewas" is being taken this week in the poverty-stricken areas of Mole Lake in conjunction with the Indian health clinic and educational survey being conducted Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday by state and federal governments, according to Congressman George J. Schneider, who left Tuesday morning to take part in the affair.

Headed by Dr. W. M. Wooster of the department in Washington, the group in charge of the survey was quick to grasp the opportunity of enrolling members of the Chippewa tribe when it gathered to be examined at Grandon, Congressman Schneider stated.

An educational survey also is to be conducted under the supervision of John Calahan, state superintendent of schools, and a staff of educators from throughout the state. P. S. Everett, superintendent of government boarding schools in the Lac du Flambeau regions, will assist the state group.

WANT DISTRICT SCHOOLS

The educational department will attempt to ascertain the number of Indian children eligible for enrollment in district schools, as well as in government boarding schools. The state department is anxious to have a large number of Indian children get their education in the district schools, where customs of the white man are taught.

It was during the congressman's efforts that a bill was passed last winter authorizing an appropriation of $24,000 to conduct the survey in the Indian territory. The survey was conducted and it was found that the Indians are not lost, or even strayed.

The present members of the tribe were born in the vicinity of Post Lake just across the line in Langlade county, and their grandfathers and grandmothers lived there, it was found. The records of the tribe show that they have occupied the same territory for at least 100 years.

It was found, however, that the Indians were lost in a more serious sense, inasmuch as they are not to be found in the tangle of negotiations between the United States government and the Chippewa Nation, and in the red tape and records of the Department of the Interior. They are not enrolled, which is one of the worst of calamities which can befall an Indian.

PLAN HEALTH CLINIC

Plans have been arranged for the health clinic, and it is expected a staff of about 30 physicians and nurses will conduct examinations. Hundreds of Indians will be brought to Grandon where they will receive a "thorough going over."

Their living conditions will be investigated, including employment, property holdings, home life, and other information will be sought. A thorough check-up will be made of those needing dental care, correction of eye, and ear disorders, lung and throat ailments, and other defects.

The congressman will be one of the principal speakers at a banquet at Vabeno Wednesday evening, which is to be given by the citizens of the community for state and federal government employees, enlisted in the work.

Reports on the progress being made in the three-fold project also will be made at the banquet, and plans for finishing the work will be discussed.

When Plane Dropped With Parachute

Here's what happened when officials of an airplane company and a parachute company at Detroit experimented with the possibility of lowering an airplane by means of a parachute. Everything went fine, the plane's parachute opened as scheduled, and the airplane drifted down as planned until the wind, which had been counted on, suddenly failed and the parachute collapsed. Warren Smith, the pilot, escaped with a bloody nose, while the only damage to the ship was a broken propeller.

CATERPILLAR CLUB NOT SO EXCLUSIVE NOW; WOMEN ENTER

It's Still Famous, However,
as May Flyers Fail to Save Lives

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
Washington—The famous Caterpillar Club grows from month to month and on a recent count there were 233 members, eligible because they had saved their lives by emergency parachute jumps from airplanes aloft. Some have made more than one such jump, as 265 have been recorded.

Miss Mary Fahrney is one of the new members. Hers wasn't an emergency jump, but when she jumped by premeditation at Joliet, Ill., her chute became entangled in the plane and she dangled for two whole hours before the thing released itself and dropped her safely to the ground. At the time the chute untangled itself she was begging her pilot to take her within 10 feet of the ground and let her jump. Another parachute jumper, Bruno Schustek, was killed when he attempted to save her. While his plane flew above hers he climbed down a knotted rope. Before he reached Miss Fahrney her chute had become dis-entangled, but Schustek's strength was gone and, unable to pull himself back, he fell 600 feet.

Five years ago, Mrs. Irene McFarland, professional jumper, became the first woman member of the Caterpillar Club after her private chute had failed to function in one descent and she had in the emergency used the Army type parachute which she also carried, descending in safety.

MANY ARE KILLED
Despite its large roster, membership in the Caterpillar Club still means something, as is indicated by the fact that some airmen reach the ground alive and some do not. Lieutenant John R. Glascock of the Army Air Corps was one of the former, and his passenger, Private Stephen Yazza, was one of the latter.

Glascock was flying upside down near March Field when his plane broke into a violent outside spin. He tried vainly to do something about it and about 100 feet from the ground shouted to Yazza, " bail out," although he could not see him in the back seat by aid of his mirror.

"The rest of the time between 1800 feet and 500 feet I was busy with the controls trying to get response from the airplane," Glascock reported. "Approximately between 400 and 500 feet from the ground I unbuckled my safety belt and was thrown from the plane in a horizontal position, slightly up, for nearly a hundred yards."

LANDED SAFELY
"I pulled the rip cord and the chute opened almost instantaneously with a very loud snap and intense jerk. I was then in a position facing the water tower of the field, and my body was parallel with the middle of the water tower. I landed and fell backward, unbraked, the parachute straps and immediately proceeded to the plane which had crashed within 200 feet of where I landed and observed that Private Yazza was still in the plane and there was no sign of life in his body."

Robert G. Chew of Valley Stream, L. I., a new civilian member, had the experience of dodging his plane as it came toppling down after him. His right wing had collapsed about 3500 feet in the air. "The ship started into a slow flat spin and I immediately started to jump," he said.

"In order to get out of the ship I had to push the wing forward, as it had slid back over the rear cockpit."

"What happened in the next few minutes is not clear in my mind. I remember standing up on the seat with one foot and the other foot on top of the wing, then diving over the side. To say I was frightened would be putting it mildly."

"After making two and a half revolutions, end over end, I pulled

TWO ROADS ANSWER STATE REQUESTS FOR HEARINGS ON MERGER

Point Out That Proposal
Would Be Immature and Accomplish Nothing

BY RUBY A. BLACK
(Post-Crescent Washington Bureau)
Washington—The Great Northern and the Northern Pacific railroads have filed with the Interstate Commerce commission a reply to the recent brief of the Wisconsin railroad commission asking reopening and further hearings in the proposed merger of these two lines.

The Wisconsin commission based its plea for reopening upon the argument, first advanced by Minnesota, the original petitioner, and followed by all subsequent petitioners, that no adequate information had yet been presented to the I. C. C. by the railroad concerning the effect of the merger upon the rights and interests of the employees of the two lines.

The railroads, in their reply, stated:

First, reopening or further hearings at this time would be premature and would serve no useful purpose, since the I. C. C. has withheld the issuance of a final order pending the submission by the applicants of a supplemental plan complying with the conditions found by the commission to be necessary in order that the proposed unification be made in the public interest. It is assumed that further hearings will be held after the submission of the supplemental plan by the railroads.

Second, the allegation that effects of the unification on employees have not been shown is untrue.

All employees had full opportunity to intervene and be heard, moreover, some did so. Much evidence along this line was presented to and considered by the I. C. C.

The railroads added that any other points brought out in the Wisconsin petitions were merely cumulative since the Minnesota petition.

Other petitioning states are Montana, Washington, North and South Dakota, Iowa, Idaho, Illinois, and Nebraska, whose petition was filed at the same time as the railroads' reply to Wisconsin.

The Commission has already conditionally authorized the consolidation of the two lines into the "Great Northern Pacific Railroad."

KOHLER'S LABOR RECORD
Speaking of labor, Gov. Kohler at Fond du Lac made the statement: "The people of the state will discriminate between deeds and words when criticism is offered by men who never worked in a factory and who never gave employment. Their appeal is based on accomplishments of others." Mr. Kohler is the last person in Wisconsin against whom radical appeals may be made to labor. He worked his way from the bottom to the top, from the machine to executive command. His direction of the Kohler company has been marked by the most progressive and enlightened relationship between employer and employee of any manufacturer in Wisconsin and perhaps of the entire country.

Years ago Mr. Kohler gave careful study to continuity of employment and worked out a system which has resulted in an average of practically 50 weeks of work each year for all of his employees. He has maintained his employment through the present and previous depressions notwithstanding it means at times the piling up of large inventories. The wage scale of the Kohler company is between 25 and 30 per cent above the average over the state, as reported by the Industrial commission. His was the first company to put continuous furnaces on an eight-hour basis. He anticipated the workmen's compensation act by voluntarily putting into effect in his plant a plan of industrial compensation at no cost to the workers, similar in all essentials to that which today is prescribed by law.

The men who are opposing Mr. Kohler for re-election and who are denouncing him as an enemy of labor have no more right to judge his record than a Chinaman in China. Not one of them knows anything about the real problems of industry, or their practical and just solution. Not one of them has had any experience touching any phase of employment. They are politicians without a constructive record in any field of productive enterprise, yet they presume to tell the state that Mr. Kohler is responsible for unemployment and that he is opposed to the aspirations and aims of organized labor. The truth of course is that he had nothing whatsoever to do with unemployment, which is a national condition, and that he is a better friend of organized labor, with a better understanding of and more sympathetic attitude toward the factors that contribute to its well-being, than all of these politicians combined.

This is not the only field in which Gov. Kohler is misrepresented and maligned. He is charged with having increased taxes, whereas there were no legislative enactments of any kind which increased taxes. His administration is charged with extravagance, whereas the facts are that for the first time in many years the finances of the state have been put in an understandable condition, with very large economies in a number of departments. The Kohler company is accused of profiteering during the war, whereas the facts are that the company was engaged in production for the government only during the year the United States was in the war and that its profits that year were less than for the preceding or following five-year period.

Mr. Kohler is even accused of responsibility for invasion of Wisconsin by Chicago bandits. The stump speakers out to "get" him do not stop at anything. They have declared that he is to blame for the development of chain banking in Wisconsin, whereas the law which made this possible was enacted while Mr. Blaine was governor and was signed by Blaine. They have a complete disregard for truth and fact.

Surely such a campaign cannot succeed among the fair-minded and thinking people of Wisconsin.

JUSTICE STEVENS
In the sudden death of Justice E. Ray Stevens of the state supreme court, Wisconsin loses a distinguished jurist and an invaluable public servant. Most of Justice Stevens' life was given to the people, and it would be a fortunate thing for them if there were more like him in the places of high responsibility and trust. He belongs to the liberal school of philosophy and his social and political views were distinctly progressive. He was one of the most ardent students on the bench and had a profound knowledge of law. His special interest lay in legislation dealing with the Railroad and Industrial commission, and his interpretation of these laws was of the greatest usefulness in their efficient application. Justice Stevens was a frequent dissenter, along with the late Justice Crownhart, and some of his minority opinions must be regarded as of more importance than the majority opinion. By a strange coincidence his is the fourth vacancy on the supreme court bench during the term of Governor Kohler. The entire state deplors the untimely death of Justice Stevens, for he was in the prime of his activity. It is earnestly to be hoped that Governor Kohler will make this vacancy an opportunity to place on the bench another liberal, and that he will use great care in selecting a man of sterling character and high ability without reference to his political influence or past affiliations.

LETTER POSTAGE INCREASE
It appears that the postmaster-general is to make a serious effort to have the letter postage rate increased from two cents to two and a half cents. Opposition to the proposal is almost universal. It is being voiced by the press, by the business interests and by the people. Quite aside from the social and economic effects of low first-class mail rates, we are convinced that a comprehensive analysis of the United States postoffice, its bookkeeping, its contracts with the railroads, its handling of the parcel post, along with practices forced upon it by congress or voluntarily adopted would show that there is no justification for a half cent increase in the letter rate.

The part the United States mails have played in the expansion and growth of business is tremendous. Every reduction from the original rate of ten cents per ounce has been highly stimulating to commercial and social intercourse. These reductions have a direct relation to heavy increases in mail volume. The two-cent letter rate has been a wise application of congressional and executive judgment to postal policy. If the internal affairs of the department itself could have been directed with the same wisdom and could have been divorced from politics, all excuse for an increase in letter rate would long since have disappeared. The postoffice department would be functioning as a solvent institution instead of a political adjunct with a deficit.

Not the least of the evils to which it has to submit is the flooding of the mails with tons and tons of worse than useless matter sent out under political frank. There are other and better ways to balance the postal budget than by increasing the letter rate. One of them is a renovation of the department itself and inauguration, with the assistance of congress, of needed reforms. Still another would be to take the whole postoffice machinery out of politics and run it as a business under the management of trained and competent executives. A two and a half cent letter rate would impose an insufferable inconvenience on the public and would in all respects be a retrogressive rather than a progressive step.

LAVOISIER'S BIRTH
On Aug. 26, 1743, Antoine Lavoisier, French chemist, and one of the founders of modern chemistry, was born in Paris, France.

Showing great precocity as a boy in mathematics and the physical sciences, Lavoisier was carefully educated at Mazarin College. When only 23 he received the prize offered by the French Academy of Sciences for the best and cheapest means of lighting city streets. Two years later he was elected a member of the academy.

He first turned his attention to chemistry in 1770, when he began experiments in combustion. After four years he published his Physical and Chemical Essays, in which he described his own theory of combustion which later was to form the cornerstone of modern chemistry. He determined that in all cases of combustion, the matter with which the combustible substance combines is, in all instances, "vital air," termed today oxygen.

Lavoisier was of considerable service to his government. He introduced valuable improvements in the manufacture of gunpowder, improved methods of agriculture on scientific principles, participated in the preparation of the metric system and formed a plan for simplifying the collection of taxes. After the Revolution this connection with the government was the occasion of his indictment before the Revolutionary tribunal, by which he was condemned to the guillotine. He was executed on May 8, 1794.

HOW DOCTORS BECOME OLD FOGIES

A reader submits his query, along with full documentary data. The reader saw a magazine advertisement by a quack who is so good that he has to use that means of attracting new patients. It never entered this reader's head, evidently, that a doctor who is good enough to please or satisfy his patients gets all the advertising he needs—his satisfied patients become walking ads. for their doctor. Amn't it the truth? Well, you're not familiar with the tricks of the doctor trade, if you doubt it.

This unsophisticated reader happened to have what the ad mentioned—varicose veins. The quack promised in the ad to remove 'em without operation, and assured prospects that he is a graduate of a medical school that once, indeed, was famous, but in the last 30 years, has degenerated far below the standard of Class A medical schools in America. So the city yoker, let us call him, all in good spirit, consulted the quack, who, as you may expect from quacks, who are guaranteed to cure him for a certain sum to be paid at a certain time, the old hokum, you know. But the good angels must have been guarding this little innocent, for he didn't sign up for the quack's treatments; he hesitated.

The near victim's next step was an odd one. He wrote to the life insurance company in which he had an insurance policy. The paper submitted by his corresponded did not include a copy of his letter to the insurance company, but they did include the letters he received from the insurance company. First was one from the Medical director of the insurance company; this doctor is probably a nice, affable, dignified gentleman, always dressed in a quiet yet impressive style as befits an officer of a great insurance corporation with a lot of ordinary doctors under him. He merely tells the dumb policyholder coldly that he would question the desirability or safety of any such method of treating varicose veins. He further informs the policyholder that "we have no knowledge of the qualifications of the writer of this advertisement."

That was no kind of an answer for the medical director to make. If he did not know that the method of treating varicose veins exploited by the quack is the best treatment we can give—and evidently he didn't—he should have assigned the query to some doctor who does know what is going on in the medical world today. If he couldn't see on the face of it that the advertiser was a quack and an unsafe man for his policyholder to have any truck with, he should have turned that question over to some physician who does know a quack when he encounters one. Had this corporation employee kept in touch with the progress of medicine he would have known that the policyholder was on the right track but in the wrong paw. There are hundreds of good, reputable physicians in the same city where the quack holds forth, who are competent to obliterate varicose veins without interrupting the patient's ordinary occupation. A great insurance company's medical director naturally would not be aware of that. His job does not call for a working knowledge of modern medicine.

The Tinymites
By Hal Cochran

The long canal trip soon was over. Once more than bunch were back on shore and, hopping in a big machine they took a long, long drive. "We're going back to Athens now. This car will get us there somehow," explained the Travel Man. "In just a few hours we'll arrive."

They drove through open country and the Tinymites thought it was grand. "I've never seen such pretty trees," said Scouty. "Just look there! The leaves are green as they can be. A sight like that appeals to me. Gee, if this ride took several days, I'm sure I wouldn't care." "I'd rather hurry back to town," said Clowny. "Where I could do me good. For hours I wouldn't sleep." The others only smiled at him. Said one, "You never seem to trim. I guess you must be lazy 'cause you always want to sleep."

And then they passed a farm land stretch and Clowny said, "I'd like to catch a ride on that farm wagon. If the farmer wouldn't care. Just look. Big oxen pull it. See? I'll bet there's lard in can be. The wheels are made of wood and it's a queer two-wheeled affair."

The Travel Man then, with a smile, said, "Well, come on, let's stop a while. The peasant looks quite friendly. Note how strangely he is dressed." The peasant shortly met each one. Said he, "I'll help you have some fun." The Times felt real lucky 'cause with kindness they were blessed.

They helped the man pitch hay a while. "I travel now for half a day," said he. "And then I pack the hay in my barn, safe and sound. Now, if you want a ride today just hop right up there on the hay." The Tinymites did and shortly went bumping o'er the ground.

Seen And Heard In New York

BY RICHARD MASSOCK
New York—Park row, according to tradition, is newspaper row.

But in reality it no longer has anything left but its tradition and the World's lone plant to stamp it as the one-time seat of New York journalism.

It's a vastly changed Park row from the glad, mad days of its prime, when the giants of current journalism were mere striplings and the city room typewriter was mightier than the camera.

VESTIGES OF GLORY

It begins stately enough at the ancient yard of St. Paul's chapel, where Washington went to worship in thanksgiving after his inauguration to the presidency of an infant republic.

It is still flanked on one side by the old postoffice, city hall park and the tall municipal building. But except for the World building it now is a lane of offices and cheap shops, chop suey parlors, talking picture theatres, billiard academies, cigar stores and passport photo galleries.

On one side of pawnshops, blatant scarlet banners announce cheap sales of jumbled haberdashery. On the other side the stores offer $4 shoes and $22.50 suits—marked "very snappy" or "classy."

Under the great gloomy, overhanging shed of the elevated's entrance to Brooklyn bridge is Furthmann's bar, where Frank Ward O'Malley, I believe, laid down the first dollar bill that opened his cash register, a bill that later was to be framed and hung on the back-bar as a good luck omen. Furthmann's, although still open all night, now is a "German kitchen."

A little farther up, past orangeade stands and cafeterias, is another landmark of the beery days of journalism, O'Rourke's cafe.

That curiosity of the gas-light era serves now as headquarters for the waiters' union, a hanging-out place for those itinerant transients who are called upon when there is to be a banquet somewhere about town.

Just before it runs into the Bowery, which it so closely resembles that three bibulous hums lay prone on its sidewalks the afternoon we were last there, Park row harbors the theatrical venture of an early feminist.

This institution is "Rose Gordon's Venice," a movie theater founded 18 years ago by a woman who still operates it with her sister.

NEWS ZONE CHANGES

Park row became the center of newspaperdom in the days when a reporter used his legs as well as his ingenuity. It was within easy sprinting distance of City Hall, police headquarters and other habitual sources of the day's grist.

Nowadays commerce and industry have moved farther uptown and the telephone has made the reporter's lot less arduous. He calls in his stories to the rewrite man from wherever he happens to find them.

Most of the newspaper offices, therefore, have migrated northward to the midtown zone crossed by Forty-second street, one group established a few paces off Times square, another over by Grand Central terminal.

Thus they again are in the thick of things and convenient to the burrows out of which and into which hundreds of thousands of potential readers scramble to and from work every day.

FEDERAL INCOME TAX COLLECTIONS LOWER IN STATE

Total Is 9 Per Cent Under Last Year's Figures—U. S. Total Higher

BY RUBY A. BLACK
Post-Crescent Washington Correspondent

Washington—With the federal income tax rate lower for half the fiscal year, collections of these taxes in 1929 were 9 per cent lower than those for the fiscal year 1928, while the total collections in the United States were 3 per cent higher despite the reduction.

During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1929, Wisconsin corporations and individuals paid $24,133,578.46 in income taxes as against $27,507,776.59 in the fiscal year 1928 and $28,492,214.34 in the fiscal year 1927.

Collections of miscellaneous federal taxes in Wisconsin were also lower in the fiscal year 1929 than in the previous year, amounting to $1,379,117.69 in 1929 and $1,709,917.97 in 1928.

Total internal revenue collections in Wisconsin amounted to $25,512,796.15 in the fiscal year 1929 as against $28,217,729.10, a decrease of 9 per cent also.

Of the total federal income taxes paid in Wisconsin in 1929, $22,065,698.96 was paid by corporations and $12,068,579.59 by individuals.

Wisconsin ranked eleventh among the 48 states in collections from documentary stamps, with $183,544.13 collected from this source, and third in the playing card stamp tax, paying $463,291.29 on cards manufactured in the state.

PROVISIONS SAME

Income-tax provisions of the revenue act of 1928, in effect during the fiscal year 1929, were practically the same as for the previous fiscal year, except that by a joint resolution of Congress approved by the president on Dec. 16, 1929, the rate of the income tax on corporations and the rates of the normal tax on individuals were reduced one per cent for the calendar year 1929.

The corporation income tax collected during the fiscal year 1929 was at the rate of 11 per cent on incomes earned in the calendar year 1929 and 12 per cent on incomes earned during the calendar year 1928, while the tax collected on corporations during the fiscal year 1929 was at the rate of 12 per cent on incomes earned in the calendar year 1928 and 13 per cent on incomes earned in the calendar year 1927.

In accordance with the joint resolution, the normal income tax collected on individual returns during the last six months of the fiscal year 1929 (the first six months of the calendar year 1930) was at the rate of one-half of one per cent on the first $4,000 of net taxable income, 2 per cent on the next $4,000, and 4 per cent on the amount in excess of $8,000.

During the first half of the fiscal year 1929 (the last six months of the calendar year 1928) the rates on normal income tax collected were 11 per cent on the first $4,000 of net taxable income, 3 per cent on the next $4,000, and 5 per cent on income in excess of $8,000.

DAIRYMEN WAITING FOR CONVENTION

Representatives of Four Corps to Attend Des Moines Gathering

BY RUBY A. BLACK
Post-Crescent Washington Correspondent

Washington—Representatives of four cooperative dairy organizations to which Wisconsin dairymen belong will attend the 14th annual convention of the National Cooperative Milk Producers' Federation in Des Moines, Iowa, Nov. 6-8, Charles W. Holman, secretary of the Federation, announced here today.

The organizations which send delegates to the convention have a membership of 317,000 farmers, marketing annually nearly $340,000,000 worth of dairy products, located in every county of the commercial dairy belt from New England across the continent to the Pacific coast.

Member organizations to which Wisconsin dairy farmers belong include the National Cheese Producers' Federation, Plymouth, Wis.; the Milwaukee Cooperative Milk Producers; the Twin Ports Cooperative Dairy Association, Superior; and the Land

O' Lakes Creameries, Inc., which has its headquarters in Minneapolis, Minn., but to which many producers of dairy products in Wisconsin belong.

The program of the convention will include addresses by national authorities and discussions of some of the pressing problems confronting them. There will also be sectional meetings of interest to the respective commodity divisions of the federation and to the technical experts employed by member organizations.

WISCONSIN IS ONLY MID-WESTERN STATE WITH GOOD CROPS

Yield Will Be Above 10-year Average This Season, Says Expert

Madison—(AP)—Wisconsin is the only mid-western state that will have crops above its 10-year average this season, Walter H. Ething, agricultural statistician, forecasted in the Wisconsin Crop and Livestock Reporter today. The prospective crop, based on statistics of the first of the month, were that it would be 1.2 per cent more than the average for the last 10 years.

The crop situation as of Aug. 1 was reported as:

Corn—Yield of 40 bushels an acre indicated with an average of 30 bushels, or 2 per cent above the 1929.

Hay—While slightly below the five-year average, hay conditions under last year's rainfall of 5,751,000 tons as compared to the five-year average of 5,111,000 tons. Alfalfa is good and the acreage the largest on record with 413,000 planted.

Oats—Production estimated at 34,330,000 bushels, or a decline of nearly 7,000,000 bushels since June 1. Early varieties were hurt when hot weather came and late varieties were affected by drought.

Barley—Production placed at 24,140,000 bushels, above last year and above five-year averages. Drought did not seriously hurt this crop.

Winter Wheat and Rye—Both were matured before hot weather came.

Acreage rather low in Wisconsin, but quality of grain is "unusually good."

Spring Wheat—Some fields reduced by hot weather. Estimated at 1,257,000 bushels as compared with 1,354,000 bushels last year. Wheat acreage, while larger than a year ago, is close to smallest since Wisconsin became a state.

Potatoes—The leading cash crop had yields reduced in some of the northern counties. In support of commercial potatoes crop still is low. Estimated yield for state is 25,335,000 bushels, over a million bushels reduction over a month ago.

Tobacco—Reduction of 2,000 pounds in estimate of July 1. Hot weather affected crop which is expected to yield 48,000,000 pounds.

The service reported good prospects for cabbage, and a satisfactory harvest of onions. Canning peas have been reduced, clover seed crops are "fair," and truck crops, such as peas and cherries production increased.

Honolulu—(AP)—Of the 1,018 pupils at the public schools here, 1,115 were Japanese, 747 Hawaiian and 474 Chinese. The public schools listed 1,113 pupils in the white.

A DOLLAR THAT BUYS MORE THAN THE AVERAGE

THE dollar you invest in fire insurance returns far more than you realize. Of course it buys indemnity from financial loss if misfortune overtakes you, but it provides so much more that it ranks as one of the most effective dollars you spend.

From the viewpoint of indemnity alone, Stock Fire Insurance is one of the cheapest of present-day necessities. Its average cost has consistently declined for the last twenty years.

Research—Engineering—Other Services

However, Stock Fire Insurance as transacted by the more than 250 company members of the National Board of Fire Underwriters offers much more than indemnity.

For good measure it provides a research and engineering service to make life and property safer—with great laboratories to test the fire safety of materials and devices.

It teaches better building practices—furnishes a service for the detection and investigation of arson—another for the improvement of community fire defenses—conducts many general fire prevention activities—and sponsors other voluntary measures, all of which have contributed to the reduction of the fire waste and the lowering of the average cost of fire insurance.

STOCK FIRE INSURANCE

effectually safeguards the home, factory, store, public institution and other forms of property. It supplies an element of certainty to business.

The more than 150 billion dollars which Stock Fire Insurance companies have at risk in the protection of burnable property in this country is indispensable to the stabilization of our credit structure.

"Dear Betty Brainerd:
I deeply love a boy I have been going with the past six months. He seemed crazy about me—showed me the greatest attention and affection, and we got along wonderfully.
"One day we had a quarrel over something very trivial. He got very angry and I said some unkind things to him. He stopped coming to see me and returned to his former drinking, wild crowd. After some time, at my request, he came to see me. I asked him if he couldn't return to our former relationship but he said he preferred going with the other crowd but perhaps we'd be friends. He had previously told my brother I was the finest girl he had ever met—that he was glad I did not smoke, drink or pet—and that the girls he formerly went with were all right to go out on a time with but not to marry.
"I am miserable without him. It breaks my heart to think it is all my fault that he is drinking. I think he still loves me, but he is very stubborn and won't give in. I am 23 and he is 25. Should I try to get him back? I go with other boys but don't enjoy myself.
Your sweetheart is behaving in a childish and selfish manner. If he considered your remarks so serious that he could no longer continue your former friendship, he should give you a chance to justify yourself.

Hints For The Shopper

Castile soap is technically a soap in which the fatty acid is derived exclusively from olive oil. This is an excellent base for soap. Certain manufacturers therefore describe as "Castile" soaps which are really made from inferior products.

The Federal Trade Commission is trying to stop this misbranding. Certain other manufacturers combine Castile with some other words in describing their products—for example, "cocoa-castile" is sometimes used. The only type of Castile soap in which the shopper should be interested is one wherein olive oil provides all the fatty acid content.

The wise shopper will study the labels when she is buying Castile soap.

MEMBERS OF SODALITY PICK OUT ACTIVITIES

Members of the Young Ladies' sodality of St. Joseph church signed up to serve on the various councils and guides into which the society has been divided at the meeting Monday night at the parish hall. It was decided to form a study club and those interested signed up to take part. The Holy Name breakfast serving committee was appointed at this time.

A series of bridge parties will be sponsored by the girls, according to plans made at the meeting, the first to be held on Monday, Sept. 8, at the parish hall. The club room will be opened the week following Labor Day. The sodality will produce a play sometime in October, the date and name to be announced later.

A report of the convention of parish societies which was held this summer in Chicago was given by the Misses Marie Doer and Cecilia Haag.

My Neighbor Says—

An inexpensive enamel, glass or nickel rod screwed to the inside of a closet door makes an ideal place to keep hand towels, and a face cloth.

When the upper part of a double boiler leaks it may be converted into a steamer if several holes are punched in top with a pointed nail.

Wax preparations should be used for oak dining tables, when no cloth is used, need considerable care. Overwaxed tables collect dust and this gets rubbed in until the surface becomes dull. Overwaxed tables should be washed.

Cut flowers in your garden in the early morning before the sun has dried them and put them in water in a deep pan for an hour before arranging in bouquets or vases. The water will then get into the stems and the flowers will keep fresh much longer.

CLUB MEETINGS

Plans for fall activities will be made at the meeting of Rebekah Three Links club at 2:30 Wednesday afternoon at Odd Fellow hall. Refreshments will be served at the social hour which will follow the business meeting.

A dance will be held in the evening.

TELL us about your plans, Ted," Sue insisted. "A business engagement."

"Well, sort of. It's the result of business," he laughed and went back upstairs where Sue and Sarah heard him whistling gaily as he changed to a tuxedo.

"Well, he's stepping out some place," Sue said.

"And he's rather pepped up over it," Sarah nodded. "Sue, mind if I collect another person for the dinner? Let's call William Burton, the doctor at the clinic. I've seen him rather often lately. I went to dinner and the theater with him night before last."

"Call anyone you please," Sue felt happy and lighthearted and wondered if Sarah cared, or didn't care, that Ted was so perfectly willing to rush off to meet somebody else. "But it's none of my business," she reflected. "I wonder who the girl is... there is a girl, I'm sure... just so she isn't the Barbara type, it's all right. Sarah is popular, anyway, and if Ted has lost interest she will, too. Everybody else is much more modern than I am."

But she had made a resolve, carried on the high tide of the letter, that she would act as modern as anybody... if she acted that way maybe she, too, could develop a casual indifference to people and things.

"Life would be rather tasteless that way, but it's better than such a bitter, bitter taste every once in awhile," she mused as she riced the potatoes into small mounds on the plates.

After dinner Mr. Merryman found a book and went to his room.

The others played bridge until they grew tired of the cards. Then they sat back, turned on the radio, and settled down to a desultory conversation, as the wind whistled around the house, and the music drifted in from gayer places.

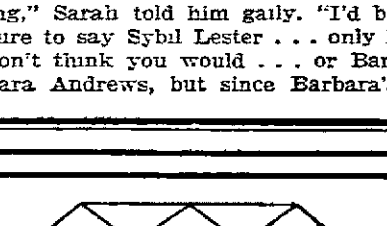

Dr. Burton, Sue decided, liked Sarah and... she almost believed Sarah liked him, too. As for Miles, Sue played up to him lightly, quite confident that he would play the same game with somebody else the next night. Men like Miles did. She changed her thoughts. Most men did. Every man. They couldn't help it. And why should they help it? And girls did, too. It was only when a girl was silly enough to let her heart get involved with a certain man that she lost interest in others.

Ted didn't come in until after the guests had gone. Sue heard his latch key in the door and thought that Sarah stirred, but when she glanced at her the girl was breathing quietly, long black lashes spread over her smooth white cheeks, evidently asleep.

The next morning at breakfast Ted was talkative. "Guess with whom I had a date?" he asked, quite as though Sarah was only a good friend. "Silly girl! That's all she is," Sue remembered herself. "And she doesn't seem to expect to be more." She watched Sarah as she poured the coffee into the cream colored breakfast cups which had coral flowers splashed on them.

"I never was any good at guessing," Sarah told him gaily. "I'd be sure to say Sybil Lester... only I don't think you would... or Barbara Andrews, but since Barbara's after the fiddling millionaire, I'm afraid, Ted, you wouldn't have much luck. Barbara loves the jingle of a pocketful of dollars. Was it your stenographer? I give up." Barbara wants. AIR RACES THRILL THOUSANDS DURING CHICAGO PROGRAM

Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh Expected to Take Leading Part

BY SHERMAN B. ALTICK
Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press
Chicago (CPA)—The thousands who thronged to the scene of the 1930 national air races Monday anticipated a glimpse of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and Mrs. Lindbergh, after announcement that the lone eagle would fly here to attend the olympiad of the sky.

Just what part the colonel will take in the races, is not announced, but it is recalled that last year in Cleveland he led a team of high hat navy flyers in a daily exhibition of dazzling stunt flying. The year previous he headed a team of army musketeers in a hair raising exhibition of aerial acrobatics.

Interest also centers upon the "powder puff" contingent of women flyers covering the last leg of their 2,345 miles derby. Leading is Mrs. Gladys O'Donnell of Long Beach, Calif., who finished in the money in the first women's air derby last year.

Miss Mildred Morgan was in second place at Madison, Wis., Sunday night and Miss Jean LaFollette, of Kansas City was third.

More feminine dash was added during the day with the expected arrival of Amelia Earhart and Mrs. Walter Camp, the former Ruth Elder of an Atlantic flier.

LIKE STUNT FLYING
Crowds here eat up the stunt flying. Marcel Doret, the French ace and Lieut. Commander Richard Atcherly, of the victorious British Schneider cup team, had the spectators ducking their heads as they streaked back and forth. Doret is spectacular and as a showman, he makes each and every thriller a bit more hair raising.

Superior, he flew past the stands about 100 feet from the ground with both hands in the air waving wildly at the crowd. The plane continued on its course, hands off, and then Doret took hold of the stick and made a perpendicular climb of 1,000 feet.

On Sunday Charles S. "Casey" Jones, Grizzled race pilot and barnstormer, who had not entered a speed event in three years, staged a comeback and, showing rare form and skill, won the final race for civilian planes over a five mile course. He was piloting a Wright powered Cessna monoplane, and averaged 142.41 miles an hour over the course.

MARINE CORPS WIN
The marine corps sea hawks copied the honors of the day for stunts by putting on some of the most thrilling aerial maneuvers ever seen. They looped in six plane formation, flew in a "staggered" "V" formation, executed "criss-cross" maneuvers, where one plane crossed the other at right angles while diving with the engines in full-throated roar and where a second of delay would mean a mid-air crash.

In performing the formation loops, the planes would dive to within a hundred feet of the ground and then pull up into a loop which when completed would find the flyers at an altitude of 2,500 feet.

For the first time, three of the "flying windmills" performed in a loose formation over the field. The three autogyros, with their whirling blades spinning in a horizontal plane, virtually landed on a dime when they descended, and took little more than that distance to rise. The gyros dipped and turned over the stand like conventional planes.

Another contraption that attracted the attention of the thousands was the "flying saucer," an odd-looking monoplane with flaps.

It was piloted by E. J. McDonnell, who built the queer looking craft. Spectators had an opportunity to compare modern air-craft with planes of a dozen years ago. Capt. Al Wilson, one of the oldest exhibition flyers in the country, gave demonstrations in his old Curtiss hushier. He looped the old plane and rolled it across the sky, diving to within a few feet of the ground. The crowd was intensely interested because the old-fashioned ship looked unweildy but performed like a modern craft, although much slower.

Navy flyers provided thrillers in their small Boeing fighters. They disappeared into the clouds for a few minutes and when they reappeared they were in a dive for a target in the center of the field, demonstrating ground attack. The flyers then executed complicated tactical maneuvers in close formation where the wings were only a few feet apart.

FLEET CORPORATION'S PRESIDENT IS DEAD

Washington (CP)—John R. Gordon, president of the Emergency Fleet corporation, died last night at Garfield hospital following an operation for appendicitis. He had been ill for about a week.

He became president of the Fleet corporation last year at the time the office was separated from the presidency of the shipping board. The corporation is the operating agency of the board.

Before assuming the office Gordon was engaged in shipping business in New York City, his home.

PEACHES BAD, TRY VEGETABLES INSTEAD

Clarksville, Ark. — P.—Beans and potatoes may not always take the place of peaches, but Arkansas fruit growers found them a satisfactory substitute this year.

Faced by a failure of the 1929 peach crop, farmers found their mountain soil well adapted to the growth of beans and potatoes.

Thousands of acres of orchard lands were turned into truck fields and early returns from the crops indicate profits will be derived from the experiment. Peach trees were left unharmed by growing other crops.

Our Children By Angelo Patri

CAN YOU LAUGH
Unless you can laugh you will be in a bad way when the children begin to grow up. Sometimes that is all that is left for you to do. An adolescent child, those in the early stages are the worst, can think of more things to do, and do them in the strangest way, than the imagination of a grown-up can compass.

What would you do if your son and daughter, aged thirteen and fifteen were down to the station to receive, in your absence of course, a very special guest, one of the kind labelled important in fathers' and mother's best clothes, and manners?

Suppose your thirteen-year-old son went to the neighbor's asking for subscriptions for a hopeless magazine telling them it was positively necessary for him to earn enough money to buy his clothes for school next term as father's business was very bad and mother had to economize strictly.

If your daughter gravely told you that now that she was fourteen she intended to entertain the boys once a week, and wanted to know what refreshments you would serve on the occasion, ices and sponge cake, and shrimp salad, and delicate sandwiches preferred. The boys would always be expected to bring the candy. Also that father and mother would please see that the living room, thirty-two by twenty-eight, was held sacred to the calling hour every Friday night.

If you suddenly found a party of twenty children on your hands and your imperturbable youngster said:

"I decided to have a party today and just called a few of them on the phone. What have you got to eat, mother?"

Could you laugh? You better. No matter what you think, no matter how hard hit you are, you would much better laugh at the absurdity of youth on its high horse, than to storm and fret and weep. A good laugh is a tonic, while rage and tears are a shocking waste of energy. Energy is precious indeed when one has to live with adolescent children.

Laugh first. Then whatever situation has been created and in perfect good humor, let the weight of it fall on the youngster's shoulders. It will not be possible to do this completely but it is always possible to let him have some of it. If he invites a party to the house and calls for refreshments it is quite in order to say "You are welcome to what we have but you know I am not prepared for a party." Help him and his friends to scour the refrigerator, let them exercise a little ingenuity, and enjoy themselves. Refreshments are not so important—a lemon and a pail of water, a box of crackers have known to make a feast.

Make your corrective remarks in private. Some you will surely have to make, but keep them between yourselves. And cultivate healthy, kindly laughter, for your sake and theirs. (Copyright, 1930, by the Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

Woll Charged With Effort To Beat Phil LaFollette

to establish at Freeport a vocational trade school for boys in furtherance of a report on the Henry Ford Trade school in Detroit made last year by Philip La Follette at Mr. Rawleigh's request. The LaFolletteites further point out that Mr. Rawleigh at his own expense provided the services of a distinguished Chicago lawyer to United States senators who in the last session of the federal congress were striving to perfect the bill introduced by the Farmer-Laborite senator, Henrik Shipstead of Minnesota, for restricting the power of judges to issue injunctions in labor disputes.

The LaFolletteites further contend that landholders of Gov. Walter J. Kohler of Wisconsin by labor spokesmen in alleged league with Mr. Woll are a further proof of a design by Mr. Woll to try to ruin Philip LaFollette during his present contest with Mr. Kohler for the Wisconsin governorship Republican nomination. They charge Mr. Kohler, with operating an anti-union open shop in his manufacturing plant at Kohler, Wis. and they contend that whatever consideration he may have shown to some labor legislation while governor does not exonerate him of being in effect an enemy to labor.

In counter-response to these attacks upon Mr. Woll and his colleagues by the LaFolletteites, the trade union leaders who side with Mr. Woll have sent organizers to Freeport to induce Mr. Rawleigh's employees to sign union cards and assume union membership. Mr. Rawleigh meanwhile continues his generous financial assistance to LaFollette Progressive projects and policies which still include, as they have always included, a highly favorable attitude toward trade union organization and toward trade union legislation for the protection of labor rights.

The LaFolletteites contend that Mr. Rawleigh's management of his personal business has never in any way affected the labor program

WTMJ WAGES HARD FIGHT TO SECURE BETTER STANDING

Four Appeals from Commission Rulings Pending in Courts

BY ROBERT MACK
Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press

Washington (CP)—In what is perhaps the most litigious case in radio jurisprudence, Louis G. Caldwell, former general counsel of the federal radio commission, is waging a legal fight to the finish against the federal agency.

As counsel for station WTMJ, at Milwaukee, Mr. Caldwell has pending in the courts four appeals from adverse rulings of the commission, and has grounds upon which to file many more if he desires. All this litigation surrounds the efforts of the station, operating with 1,000 watts evening power, to improve its assignment on the air.

In the battle of briefs and counter briefs the feeling between the station and the commission evidently has become tinged with acrimony. The commission goes so far as to admonish the station and its counsel for its "unwillingness to settle its problems before the commission" and criticizes it for its failure to "cooperate." These contentions are made in a statement filed in the court of appeals here on one of the four pending cases.

REQUESTS DENIED
And then, in the face of these accusations, the commission proceeds to deny four separate requests made by Mr. Caldwell that hearings be held before the commission to air its troubles, which forces the Milwaukee station to appeal to the courts if it is to have any hearing at all. These four requests were in the nature of petitions to intervene on the application of a similar number of stations licensed to operate on the 630 kilocycle channel, to which WTMJ is assigned. It claims that the operations of these stations on its channel causes ruinous interference with reception, and restricts the service area of the station.

What the upshot of this involved legal situation will be remains for the court to decide. Mr. Caldwell has attacked the problem of getting the Milwaukee station a better assignment from every conceivable angle, but each time has been rebuffed. Wisconsin, under the commission's own calculations, is entitled to a high-powered station operating on a cleared channel, but it has not seen fit to wrest from some other station so choice an assignment, even if it would more nearly equalize the distribution of facilities as the law requires.

With the four appeals now pending, and four others imminent, the actual show-down, however, will come next month when WTMJ is heard on its most recent application for the choice 870 kilocycle channel assignment now held by stations WENR and WLS, both in Chicago.

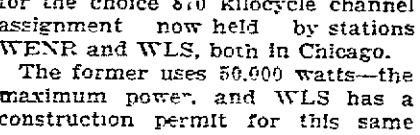

The former uses 50,000 watts—the maximum power, and WLS has a construction permit for this same power.

WTMJ not only seeks this exclusive channel, but it wants its power boosted from its present 1,000 watts night and 2,500 watts day, to the 50,000 watt maximum. Chicago is in excess of its station quota, while Wisconsin is under its allowance. All 55 of the front rank stations will participate in the general high-power hearing schedule for Sept. 15, at which time WTMJ will present its case.

HAPPY FARMER OWES HEALTH TO FAMED KONJOLA

Three Years of Suffering from Constipation and Rheumatism Ended by Master Medicine

MR. IRA HOGE
"About three years ago my system attacked me," said Mr. Ira Hoge, Route No. 1, Bismarck, N. Dak. "I experienced sharp pains in my legs, knees and ankles. My knees then became stiff and swollen, my ankles were swollen to twice their normal size. The damp weather I could hardly walk. Constipation added to my misery. I could find nothing that gave me relief."

"I read and heard so many reports about Konjola that I decided to give it a trial. Imagine my surprise when after taking only a few bottles I was completely relieved of those sharp rheumatic pains. I took four bottles of Konjola and now all the stiffness and soreness in my bowels are normal. I feel better generally than I have for years."

It is the same remarkable success wherever Konjola is produced and put to the test. At Konjola welcomes any test, no matter how severe.

Konjola is sold in Appleton, Wis., at Schlicht Bros. drug store, at all the best druggists in all parts throughout this entire section.

DRYS OF INDIA BACK GANDHI'S LIQUOR BOYCOTT

Total Prohibition Is One of Indian Leader's Demands

Calcutta (P)—Demand for a "dry" India was made by a committee of the Indian Chamber of Commerce of Calcutta in backing up Mahatma Gandhi in his fight for prohibition along with Indian independence.

Gandhi, in his eleven point summary of the Nationalists' demands started with "total prohibition."

In a communication to the government of India the Chamber of Commerce committee urged that the government should embark at once on a policy of prohibition and, foregoing the revenue derived from liquor, should either curtail expenditure to the extent of that revenue or raise it from other sources.

As an advocate of prohibition in the interests of the peasant and the workman in general Gandhi claims that the annual drink bill of the country approximates $350,000,000, while the yearly drink revenue of the British government is more than $70,000,000.

India, in the opinion of the committee of the Chamber of Commerce, would soon become "dry" if she had the power to legislate according to her requirements. It was pointed out by the committee that the various provincial governments had rejected popular demands for prohibition solely on the ground of loss of revenue.

The committee contends that the picketing of the toddy or grog shops, as conceived by the Nationalist congress party as one means of depriving the government or revenue, is a perfectly legitimate method of persuasion and that "the people have certainly the right to adopt all peaceful and legitimate methods for discouraging the use of liquor."

Wheelbarrows That Climb Stairs Found In Changsha

Washington, D. C. — Changsha, China, reported captured by Communist forces, is described in a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic Society as follows:

"Changsha is a city of fireworks literally and figuratively. The Fourth of July firecrackers used by the American boy before the war and the Fourth of July fireworks used by the Chinese are so widely distributed in Changsha that it is a point for operations between the northern and southern armies, especially in 1922 when it was a scene of the long delayed meeting of the two units.

CAPITAL OF HILLY HUNAN
"The city is the capital of the hilly province of Hunan, important because it contains numerous fields, many unworked, and because in it, to the north of Changsha, is the huge lake, Tung-tung, which acts as a reservoir for the Yangtze floods.

"Among Changsha's most interesting sights are the wheelbarrows that climb stairs. Some distance ahead of the regulation wheel there is another smaller one in which a man over flagstone steps or bridges, the handles of the wheelbarrow are lowered until the auxiliary wheels rise above the next higher step. Then the wheelbarrow, which often carries 300 or 400 pounds, goes from wheel to wheel until the wheel level stretch of the flagstones is attained.

COMET STARTED RIOT
"In Hunan, the necromancer has exerted much power and Changsha was so well protected by the lucky constellation under which it was founded and by the Holy Hill which guards it that it formerly was thought a preface for the foreign devil to enter. In 1919, there were serious riots, mainly directed against the growing commercial power of foreign firms but the disturbance also had its astronomical accompaniments, for it was the approach of Halley's comet which touched off the explosion.

"Today Changsha is closely linked with New Haven, Connecticut, for there is, just outside the rapidly disappearing wall, in which the inhabitants once took great pride, one of the best known mission schools in China, which is Yale's contribution to the education of the Chinese who cannot come to America.

PROVINCE HAS COAL BEDS
"A large part of Hunan is an unworked field of anthracite and bituminous coal and at Pingshan, which is connected with Changsha by railroad, there is one of the mines which furnishes fuel for the great iron works at Hanyang.

"Among the great men who have been among Changsha's chief products the most famous was General Tseng Kuo Fan, whose cooperation with Chinese Gordon was largely instrumental in putting down the Taiping rebellion.

General Tseng was not only a soldier and statesman but a literary man as well and his collected works of 156 books were edited by Li Hung Chang.

"Changsha lies on a projected line of railway between Peking and Canton; and trains have already

YOUNG HOSTESS TO BE IN CHARGE OF MANSION

Richmond, Va. (CP)—The stern, gray mansion that has been the home of Virginia's governors for more than a century will have a new and youthful hostess for the winter session.

Society is looking forward to an autumn in which the mansion and its pretty hostess will have no small part.

Susanne Pollard, daughter of Governor John Garland Pollard and official hostess at 23, returns to the Virginia capital Sept. 15 from Europe. Then the mansion will assume an important role in the series of events interesting to the younger social group.

"Miss Sue" has charmed Virginia as first lady of the state. Smartly dressed and with the youthfulness of a school girl, she seems perfectly at home in surroundings that speak eloquently of powdered wigs and the formality of colonial days.

Entertaining the president of the United States for two hours was one of her first tasks, and the President apparently enjoyed himself as they chatted in a reviewing stand.

"A Straight Line is the shortest distance..."

YOU need a flashlight or an alarm clock. That's one point in a common geometrical problem. Somewhere a manufacturer is making, a store is offering for sale, exactly the flashlight or alarm clock you should have. That's the second point in your private problem. . . . And advertising is the straight line that shows the shortest distance between the two!

Day after day, in the advertising you'll find straight lines drawn direct to the products you need. Look for them. Follow them. They may save you hours of searching.

And more than time, they'll save you money. Advertised products are those whose honest worth has made them popular. Merchants and manufacturers who advertise regularly have passed the public's test of fair dealing and reliability. 4-YEAR-OLD BOY IS KILLED BY TRUCK; EXONERATE DRIVER

Eugene Winarski Dies When He Runs Into Path of Approaching Vehicle

Menasha—Eugene Winarski, 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Winarski, 676 Racine-st., was instantly killed about 4:30 Monday afternoon when he was struck by a truck driven by Irwin Nieland, 1345 Spencer-st., Appleton. The accident occurred on Racine-st. near the intersection with Fifth-st. when the little boy ran directly into the path of the approaching machine.

Nieland, who was driving for the Hiltz Junking company of Appleton, was going south of Racine-st. when the child ran out into the road from the right side. The driver twisted the wheel to the left to avoid the accident but the boy was struck by the right rear side of the truck and knocked down.

Dr. A. B. Jensen was called and examination showed that the child had sustained a broken neck and a fractured skull. Nieland was questioned by Menasha police who were satisfied that he was not responsible, and no charge was lodged against him.

The Winarski boy is survived by his parents, three brothers, Donald, Robert, and Marvin; and one sister, Gertrude. Funeral services will be held from St. John's Catholic church at 9 o'clock Thursday morning, the Rev. E. Polaczky officiating. Interment will be in St. John's cemetery.

WOMEN GAINED RIGHT TO VOTE TEN YEARS AGO

No Pictures Taken of Nineteenth Amendment Signature by Colby

Washington—(AP)—Ten years ago today the right of women to vote throughout the United States was proclaimed.

The slender, quiet man who made valid the instrument of announcement—Bainbridge Colby, secretary of state—performed the act without benefit of news cameramen. It was a sweltering day. A messenger ran up the walk of a spacious residence to the secretary took the proclamation, carried it to his desk, and quietly signed it. The nineteenth amendment was in effect.

Women's organizations preparing to celebrate this decennial anniversary of their victory discovered that not a single picture was made of the event. Its simplicity throws into sharper outlines the events of the strenuous years preceding.

Leaders are recalling those years today. They are calling up a swift-moving succession of events, in each of which the same eager, determined faces appear—Alice Paul, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, Dr. Anna Shaw, Mary Garrett Hay, Inez M. Holland, Maud Younger.

While they reminisce, they look forward to another campaign for a blanket declaration of "equal rights" for men and women in the constitution. The National Woman's party is going after the amendment carrying this declaration.

FIGHT 40 YEARS

Rare in history is the campaign like that the women waged for the ballot. It goes back to 1878, when the Susan B. Anthony amendment was introduced. Forty years later to a day the house passed the measure for the first time, but not until the last month of 1913 did the issue become a snowball of public opinion.

Then Alice Paul, slim young social worker, came from New Jersey and started work Women flocked to her command. Her generalship is still a thing for conversation.

The day Woodrow Wilson came to town for his first inauguration, she had a parade in progress. The feminists in progress. The feminists say the president-elect stepped from his train asking, "where are the people?" and was answered, "down on the avenue, watching the suffragists."

PICKETED WHITE HOUSE

Through the years more deputations went to the president. On Jan. 9, 1917, President Wilson informed that he would receive no more; that their next step must be to convert public opinion. The next day found them picketing the White House.

Peaceful picketing continued—in rain, in sleet, in snow—until police began a series of arrests. Between 400 and 500 women were arrested; before the end, Miss Paul, the leader, had been placed under observation in a psychiatric ward. Some actually went to the workhouse, served their sentences and returned to their picketing.

But out of prison was born fresh inspiration: A "Prison special" soon was steaming through the country, carrying the former prisoners to tell the story.

In January, 1918, Wilson declared himself in favor of the amendment. The next day it passed the house, only to be defeated in the senate. Then began intensive lobbying, and Mrs. E. M. Baker, the chief lobbyist, secured passage of the bill, $50,000 in five months, and resulted in a gain of five senators. With the beginning of the special session in 1919—called to pass appropriation bills, the women renewed their efforts. They encountered tremendous criticism for persisting at this time; but they weathered the storm of censure.

On June 4 the senate passed the amendment by a slender margin. There was great rejoicing; but the leaders did not stop until the thirty-sixth state, Tennessee, had ratified. The final act in their drama did not occur until 1920, when at the Republican National convention in Chicago, they marched, line beside line, each bearing a banner reading: "We are here. Where is the thirty-sixth state?"

FORMER DRY AGENT ON STAND IN U. S. TRIAL

Seattle, Wash. — (AP)—George W. Behner, former federal prohibition agent, was called to resume the stand today as witness against his one time chiefs, Roy C. Lyle, former prohibition administrator; William M. Whitney, assistant administrator; Earl Corwin, and R. L. Bryant, former agents, and C. T. McKinney, former assistant federal attorney, charged with accepting bribes and conspiring with former northwest rum runners.

Behner testified yesterday Whitney destroyed a page from the little black book on which Roy Olmsted, conspired to prohibit officers, Behner said he took the book from Olmsted during a raid which led to the breaking up of the Olmsted ring, adding that the names of Whitney and Corwin were on it. Behner also said he believed the name of Thomas P. Revell, former United States attorney here, was also listed, with sums of money marked alongside.

Behner, who served a year and a day in McNeil Island penitentiary after being convicted of padding his expense accounts as a dry agent, said he had been warned by Whitney to confine his energy to search for moonshine stills after he had traded several lots of Olmsted liquor from a landing dock to a livery stable.

MANY EXHIBITS ON GROUNDS AS FAIR OPENS AT DE PERE

Livestock Department Is Crowded as Dairymen Bring in Animals

De Pere—After working industriously all day Monday the superintendents of the agricultural departments of the Northeastern Wisconsin fair, and the farmers who supplied the farm products were ready Tuesday to greet record crowds at the fair this week.

According to Edward Schuster, superintendent, the department of cattle is filled to capacity with the finest cattle in this vicinity of all the leading breeds. Charles Knop, Manitowish county has 18 heads of Holsteins in the show stalls; Richard Genke, Bonduel, 18 Holsteins; Rosebush Ranch Co., Amasa, Mich., 17 head of Herford; John P. Schels, Stangeville, 18 head of Shorthorns; Martin Metzler, 11 head of Jerseys; Lawrence Metzler, 18 head of Jerseys; Baumgartner Bros., 12 head of Guernseys; Anton Yundt, Marshfield, 20 head of Jerseys; Schmidt Bros., 20 head of Guernseys; Allouez Guernsey Farms, 16 head; Lawrence Peterson, Oconto Falls, 20 head of Ayrshires; Emil Mueller, Seymour, 20 head of Brown Swiss; Emil Schmidt and Sons, Manitowish, 19 head of Brown Swiss; Frank Steffen, Tille, 14, 16 head of Brown Swiss, and the 4-H club boys of Brown-co, 35 calves.

Thirty animals are entered in the horse department beside 13 teams that will be used in the horse pulling contest, according to Henry D. Wisheart, superintendent of the department.

Four hundred animals are occupying all the pens in the sheep department and about 300 hogs of all ages, sizes and breeds have been entered in the swine department. Among the swine entries is a ton litter owned by William Joyce.

MANY POULTRY EXHIBITS

Thomas Cashman, superintendent of the poultry department said that the poultry building was packed with crates of all kinds of birds and rabbits of the best breeds raised in this vicinity. He made the statement early Monday and declared that if many more birds and rabbits came to the fair he did not know what he would do with them. George M. Wells, Oshkosh, is to judge the poultry and Fred T. Witt, Clintonville, the rabbits.

It is very likely, however, that the educational building will equal any other building on the fair grounds in popularity as it contains the exhibits of 40 rural schools of Brown-co, and of all the 4-H Girls clubs of the county. This department will catch the visitors more promptly and hold them longer than any other department of the fair. It will catch the visitor quickly because each child in the school districts and the 4-H club centers will lead his dad direct into the educational building. The educational building will hold the visitors longer than other buildings because it contains the largest and best display of children's work ever set up for public approval in this community. The display consists of 4000 entries.

Another reason for the predicted popularity of the educational building is that Mrs. L. E. Hopkins' 4-H club girls are to entertain the visitors with their exhibits of sewing, baking and canning, and with demonstrations of the work in each line. The girls of each of these teams are bright, skillful and worthy of championship honors.

The following is the demonstration program of 4-H club teams as announced for fair week by Mrs. Hopkins:

Tuesday, 1:30 p. m.: Alma Thomas and Florence Lamine of the Oneida Sewing club demonstrated "holders." Loraine Smecster and Helen Erickson, of the Ashwaubenton Sewing club will demonstrate "Sun Suits." Elizabeth Martin and Nellie Van Durzen, of the Rockland Sewing club demonstrated "bags."

Wednesday, 10 a. m.: Winnifred Ryan of the North Pittsfield Baking club will demonstrate "Quick Coffee Cake."

Wednesday, 1:30 p. m.: Eva Heran and Genevieve Lauer of the Holland Sewing club will demonstrate "Sewing and Clothes Pin Aprons." Edith Dupuis and Elbert Zimbeck of the Oak Grove Baking club will demonstrate "Muffins." Genevieve Schott and Ethel May Schott of the New Franklin Canning club will demonstrate, "Canning Fruits, Vegetables, and Meats."

Thursday, 10 o'clock a. m.: Josephine Sviwegel and Celia Drobek of the Woodview Sewing club will demonstrate the "Tea Towel." Alice Reentmeester, Erna Janquet of the Finger Road Sewing club will demonstrate the "Kimono Sleeve Dress."

Thursday, 1:30 p. m.: Luella Johnson and Caroline Jacklin of the Pine Grove Baking club will demonstrate "Waffles and Quick Coffee Cake."

CHARGES KOHLER HOLDS UP ELECTRIC RATES

Milwaukee—(AP)—No hope for lower electric light and power rates may be entertained while Gov. Walter Kohler is chief executive. Theodore Kronsage, Jr., Milwaukee attorney and president of the village of Fox Point, said in a radio address last night.

"Bills offered by the league of municipalities at the last session of the legislature were defeated in the senate by the power lobby led by former Senator W. L. Smith, now executive secretary to Gov. Kohler," Kronsage said. "In fact, Col. Smith fought these measures so openly and bitterly that he was rebuked for his activities on the floor of the assembly, while the assembly was in session."

"It is vital to the interests of the people that this program be adopted by the legislature and approved by the governor."

"A Progressive legislature will pass it—a stalwart legislature will kill it."

Two of the largest Italian shipyards have been consolidated with a capital of 100,000 lire and three years' work ahead.

FORMER FARM BOY, NOW EDITOR, NEXT TEXAS GOVERNOR

Defeats "Ma" Ferguson for Democratic Nomination by 100,000 Votes

BY DON HINGA
Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press

Houston—A farmer boy who built a fortune of many millions out of two shallow oil wells, turned his talents to newspapers and became a leading publisher, then sought honors in politics, will be the next governor of Texas.

He is Ross S. Sterling, of Houston, who in Saturday's run-off primary defeated "Ma" Ferguson, by almost 100,000 votes for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination. This is equivalent to election in Texas. Nominally, Sterling defeated Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson, but no Texas voter had a minute's doubt that if "ma" was elected she would have made but few steps without counsel of Jim.

Many Texas dailies today were saying that Fergusonism was crushed in Texas by the avalanche of votes. But "Jim" has been buried with great ceremony five times in the past, only to come back. This year, with every major Texas paper against him and with very little financial support, he ran 70,000 votes ahead of the field of 11 in the first primary.

RAN FOR PRESIDENT

Ferguson was defeated for governor in 1913 after being impeached in 1917. He ran for president on the "American Party" in 1920 and got but few votes. He was defeated for the United States senatorship in 1922 and in 1924 he ran Mrs. Ferguson for governor and was victorious. She was defeated for reelection in 1925 and now is beaten by Sterling.

The life of the Democratic nominee reads like that of an Horatio Alger novel. Born on a small farm near Houston, he tilled the soil, until the lure of the sea called and he joined his brothers in a freighting service on a small schooner on Galveston bay. An injury caused Sterling to be bound to a chair for a year and during this time he read voraciously. After recovering, he opened a country store and from the meager profits got together a small stake which he put into two shallow producing wells in the great Sour Lake oil field.

He showed his pluck when he took over a well that failed to show oil at a certain level and gambling on his judgment forced the hole lower. A gusher was struck and from the gusher grew the giant Humble Oil & Refining company which Sterling sold to Standard Oil a few years ago for many millions.

BECAME CITY BUILDER

With his money, Sterling became a city builder and erected two skyscrapers in Houston. He spread his money over many philanthropies, children's camps on the bay near here, libraries, gifts to churches and other works of kindness. When he became highway commissioner of Texas, he donated the salary to the state's eleemosynary institutions.

Now approaching the masterful Ferguson in the rough and tumble combats of a savage campaign Sterling simply was himself and won the hearts of the voters by his homely talks. Accused of having 23 bath-

The danger periods are from 7 a. m. to 8 a. m. and from 6:30 p. m. to 7:30 p. m. Fate will start to shift the scenes in your life on this date for a new act in your life's drama—only time can tell whether it be for a comedy or tragedy, much however, depends upon yourself. Finances uncertain.

The child born on this August 27th will be a timid being, and will lack self-confidence. To overcome its self-consciousness, it should be discouraged from thinking of self at all—it should be taken out of itself. It will have a very unselfish nature, and will be warmly affectionate.

You are a rather discontented person because you desire more from life than you have the courage to demand. You allow your pluck to stray at zero, and you cannot climb because fear has shackled your feet. You are afraid to go after the things you want, and naturally they will not come to you unasked. You do not tackle your jobs wholeheartedly enough—you do not trust your cause. You are over-confident in others, and expect them to do that which only you can do yourself. Whatever is attempted is never well done till the drive breathes himself into his deed.

You are not an optimist among the Jonahs; your spirits are usually a reflection of the atmosphere which surrounds you. You weep with the mourners, and laugh with the joy-makers. You are too much affected by your environment for stable for most criminals. "I am your own peace of mind and physical

CRIMINALS ARE MADE

London—Criminals are made, not born, in the opinion of Captain Clayton, Governor of Dartmoor Prison, who thinks that the State is responsible for most criminals. "I am strongly of the opinion," he says, "that most criminals are manufactured by the State. There would be very few criminals if only we could get the surroundings of the poorer classes to such a standard that the children were cared for properly."

SHORT WAVES ADDING TO RADIO FLEXIBILITY

Chicago—(AP)—Short waves, as an adjunct to broadcasting, are finding an ever-increasing place in the world of listening in.

Portable transmitters, operating on wavelengths under 100 meters, are making it possible to pick up programs where a microphone connected directly to a wire line could not be used. Broadcasts from airplanes, ships at sea and numerous other points of origin can be brought to the radio audience in no other manner.

Short wave apparatus also is finding a place in the description of track meets and other similar events. One-man portable transmitters have been designed which can be taken directly onto the field on the back of the announcer whose hand microphone permits him to get at the heart of things without difficulty.

With broadcasts where short waves are used, the transmitter, using up to 50 watts power, feeds a receiver which at the most is not more than 40 miles away. This receiver is directly connected to the wire line leading to the broadcast.

Engineers, while confronted with transmission problems on short waves that they did not meet on the broadcast bands, have solved many of them, and short wave pick-ups now are of a quality that compares favorably with the regular broadcast waves.

France is seeking to develop touring by airplane, through a government committee.

Sad Sam Jones Wins Sixth Straight; Beats A's 3-2

VETERAN HURLER HAS DEFEATED MACKS THREE TIMES

Senators Trail by 6 1-2 Games; Two More in Series With Champs

BACK in 1915 a youth of 23 years, with a mediocre minor league record, and answering to the name of Samuel Pond Jones, made his bow to major league baseball as a member of the Cleveland Indians.

The boy from Woodfield, Ohio, who cost the Indians $800, wandered in the American league, from Cleveland to Boston, New York, St. Louis and finally to Washington. Before he reached the Senators in 1927 his name was shortened to "Sad Sam." Maybe it was because of the expression on his face, or his ability to spread grief among opposing batsmen or again it may have been the fact that he played in four world series without winning a game.

Sad Sam is still in Washington spreading grief, especially among the Philadelphia Athletics as they strive to tighten their grip on the league leadership.

His season's record reads 13 victories as against five defeats. He has defeated the A's in three out of four games.

Jones accounted for his sixth straight game, yesterday in downing the Athletics 3 to 2. Lefty Grove was opposing him, but Sad Sam met the champions down with only six hits and broke Grove's string of eight consecutive triumphs.

Lending powerful aid to Jones was 24-year-old Joe Cronin, swinging a wicked bat. He accounted for all of the Senators' runs sending Heine Manush across in the fourth, with a drive into the right field stands and scoring Sam Rice with a single in the eighth, with what proved to be the winning rally.

The victory left the Senators six and one-half games back of the Athletics in the series.

The only other game played in either of the major leagues saw the Detroit Tigers take the measure of the St. Louis Browns 7 to 5 after Tom Bridges, rookie hurler from the Three-Rive league, had issued 12 bases on balls.

Bridges, who has a record of striking out 140 batsmen in 12 consecutive games last year, received credit for winning his first major league start although Waite Hoyt was called to the rescue in the ninth.

BOXER SERIOUSLY HURT ON COAST

Frankie Campbell, San Francisco, in Hospital With Concussion of Brain

San Francisco — (AP) — Frankie Campbell, San Francisco heavy-weight, was seriously injured last night in his bout with Max Baer of Livermore, Calif., when he suffered a concussion of the brain in taking a terrific beating.

The fight was halted in the fifth round and Campbell sagged to the floor. He was unconscious for 25 minutes while doctors and doctors worked on him in the open air ring in the ball park.

Finally he was taken to an emergency hospital, still unconscious. It was a fierce battle from the first round, with Baer at 194 pounds holding a 15-pound advantage. An unfortunate incident in the second round hurt Campbell. After he had pushed and half knocked Baer to the floor he turned his back to his fallen opponent.

Baer jumped up, ran across the ring and hit Campbell while he had his back turned. He received a terrific blow on the jaw, but saved himself from falling by winding his arms around the top rope.

CANADIAN MARATHON SWIM CARD TOMORROW

Toronto, Ont. — (AP) — The Canadian national exhibition's 15-mile marathon swim to be held tomorrow, has attracted 272 entries, most of them from Canada and the United States, but a few from Europe and Asia as well.

Ed Keating, who won the event last year, now an entry in his own right, will include such contenders in other years as Marvin Nelson, Fort Dodge, Ia., Ernest Verhoeven, Germany, George Young, of Toronto, Clarence Ross of New York, Melvin Burnet of Toronto and many others. George Blagden of Memphis, Tenn., a newcomer, has drawn the attention of many critics. William J. Palm, North Fond du Lac, is an entrant.

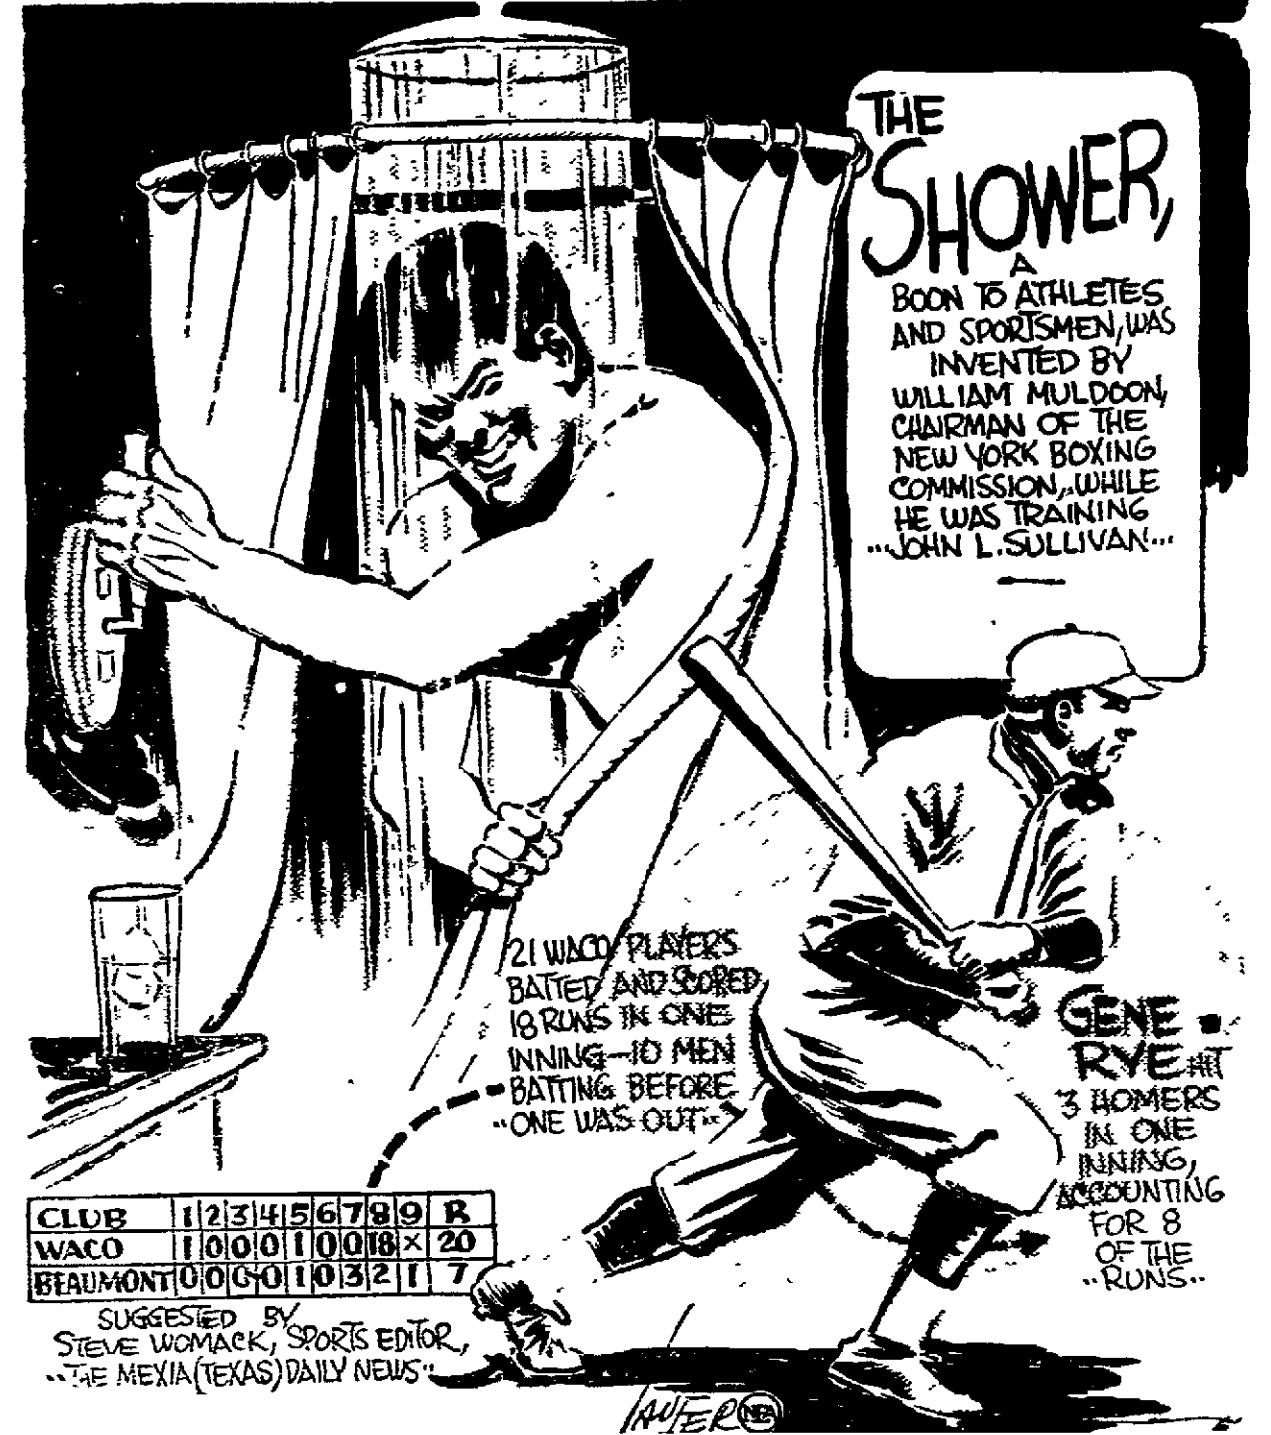

Present indications are that only one woman would compete, Anna Priller Beyer of Miami, Fla., who finished fifth in the women's 10-mile marathon swim last Friday.

First prize in the marathon is $10,000.

HAGEN STILL TO BE HEARD FROM

WHEN Walter Hagen, with a score of 149 for thirty six holes faded by three strokes to qualify for match-play in the P. G. A. championship there were those who said that the old Hag was through. Up to the present writing Hagen had had no opportunity to disprove these charges, but there are a good many people, myself included, who refuse to take his fall from grace on Hagen's part as any thing like an excuse for counting him out. He more than any other outstanding golfer in the long history of the game has had occasional lapses from the worm which we know as his best, but each time he has failed he has come right back to do something just a wee bit better than he has done before.

Hagen, with nearly two decades of intensive competition behind him, like all the rest of us who have been in the game for a long time, find it, I am sure, increases my difficulty each year, to keep himself up for every event which comes along. Nerves in a sense, the high strung temperament under control, are a first necessity for winning golf; and the competitor who steps upon the first tee entirely calm is not going to do better than an ordinarily good round no matter how great his skill. And ordinarily good rounds are not good enough nowadays to place anywhere near the top.

If any proof be needed of the truth of this statement one might ask the leading pros how they feel toward the end of the punishing winter circuit. Al Espinosa told me something about this when we were playing in Savannah last February. "I rate played so much golf," said Al, "that when I am out there trying to make a score I honestly can't tell how I ought to go about it. The clubs all feel strange to me." Of course in Hagen's case it is probably not a question of physical exhaustion, as it is with the winter campaigners, but the brain fatigue must be there anyway.

AGE NOT SO IMPORTANT

It seems to me that when we begin to look for a man's competitive career before he reaches the age of forty we are confusing the physical requirements of golf with those of boxing, basketball, and tennis, where the drain of energy is far more rapid. And we are forgetting too that Harry Vardon, in 1929 at the age of 47, and in the transatlantic American tour, carried off one stroke can of Ted Ray in the Open Championship, and undoubtedly would have won had not a gale of wind sprung up as he was playing the last few holes. George Von Elm played several practice rounds with Hagen at Interlachen and George told me that Walter was hitting the ball then as well as he had ever seen him hit it.

The fact that in practice Walter three times played the first nine in thirty-two and in the first round of the tournament scored a thirty-four over the difficult last nine is evidence that he had not fallen off a great deal so far as skill is concerned. No, I think we shall have to wait some time longer before we say good-bye to Walter Hagen. I should not be surprised if one recent failure had the same effect as his overwhelming defeat by Compton two weeks before he won the British Open for the third time.

KEEP EYE ON BALL

It seems to me that the average golfer would be a whole lot better off if no one had ever said anything about the necessity for keeping the eyes glued upon the ball. There is an outburst of observation and location are sufficient. When a man gazes fixedly at a golf ball he is doing something wholly unnecessary and destructive of the rhythm and relaxation he has striven for. I have found little value in the maxim "keep your eye on the ball" except on the putting green and in playing very short approach shots. The longer shots which are missed are usually caused by something else than looking up.

WILSON CHARLES DECATHLON CHAMP

Youngster from Florida Who Came Unheralded in Flivver Places Third

Pittsburgh — (AP) — Wilson Charles, sneaky Onida Indian from Haskell Institute, Lawrence, Kas., is the newly crowned champion of America's all-around track and field athletes, but he has a young rival from way down south who hopes to top them all by the time of the Olympic games in 1932.

Partially obscured by the dramatic finish in which Wilson came from behind to beat out big Jim Stewart for the title in the final event yesterday was the battle for third place between Harlow Rothert of Stanford university and an unheralded newcomer, Joe Hall of the University of Florida, who is not yet 21.

In a little flivver with a couple of vaulting poles strapped on the side, the sturdy 190 pound Hall and a college mate, Forest Munger, came all the way from Florida at their own expense to compete here. They came along without benefit of hallyhoo or bugles.

But when the final returns of the decathlon came in just before sun down after more than eight hours of running, jumping, vaulting and throwing things, Hall was third and his slinky sidekick, Forest Munger, was fifth. Although the lightest man in the field at 140 pounds, Munger held his own through the strong arm events and pulled up to fifth place when they came to his specialty, the pole vault, in which he turned in the best performance of all.

Next Sunday the Milks will play Black Creek at Erb park. The team expects to have full strength for next week's game.

Sailing Yachts Isn't Such A Peaceful Job

BY LAWRENCE PERRY

Copyright, 1930
NEWPORT, R. I. (CFA) — Yachting as a sport is associated with idle summer days and conditions characteristically mild. But when it comes to big yachts, craft of the size of the four sloops built as cup defenders, and when the prize is the honor of selection as the boat to defend the American cup, then yachting becomes as grim and punishing as any sport that exists.

Take those four sloops that raced in a grueling contest on the Thursday. Any one of several accidents might have occurred involving loss of life and at best those unfortunates, sleeked almost constantly at angles ranging from twenty five to forty degrees offered precarious footholds for officers and men.

Time and again green waves boarded these sloops and anyone had the hitting power to carry a seaman overboard like a rag doll. Even under conditions more moderate foothold is none too safe, for the huge racing craft and of course there is always the danger of something carrying away, and mentally as well as physically there is a strain.

A yacht race sailed among skilled navigators is an unceasing battle of wits and nerve ability from start to finish. Psychology is always an element, for the psychology. Can your opponent be bluffing if you hold your course even though technically the other boat has the right of way? Will your rival have the nerve to insist upon his rights to the point of sinking your boat or having his own craft sunk? Has your boat the speed and maneuverability to take you around a tricky corner? Upon your decision now will hang the life of your craft and those aboard her. You can outmaneuver a man, or be outmaneuvered in a yacht race as pointedly as in short that can be named.

But of one thing you can be certain and that is that none of the racing men on any of the four sloops are out on the ocean to be outmaneuvered and there is need of brains. A yacht race involves unceasing constructive thought. The skipper must think not only in the present emergency but cast his thoughts ahead.

All the men engaged in sailing the four sloops of the cup defense sloops are showing today evidences of

PANTELEO MATCHED WITH DAVIE MAIER

Milwaukee — (AP) — A 10 round bout has been signed between Paul Panteleo and Davie Maier, heavyweights, for the opening of the indoor season Sept. 3 at the Antlers fight club, promoter Edly Mitchell said today.

For this reason, if for no other, the selection committee will be moved to name a defender as soon as it can in order that the men directing the destinies of the successful boat can go off and play golf and tennis and have as much time as possible before Shamrock is encountered to forget all that has happened and to turn up on Sept. 13 with minds and bodies geared to the supreme test.

MRS. HILL SCORES 75 IN QUALIFYING ROUND OF K. C. MEET

Defending Champion Negotiates 18 Holes in 7 Under Par

KANSAS CITY — (AP) — A dazzling par-cracking 75 in the qualifying round having served notice she was on her game and ready to defend her woman's western golf title, Mrs. O. S. Hill, Kansas City, faced Miss Louise Adams of Indianapolis today in the first round of match play.

Mrs. Hill's 75, seven under woman's par and only two over perfect figures for men on a course whose undulating fairways penalize the "lightest hook or slice, was 11 better than the medal score of Miss Adams. The medalist was favored to dispose of her opponent.

Heading the lower bracket was the modest Mrs. Gregg Lifer of Los Angeles, who remarked her 76 in the qualifying test was "just luck" but who has been shooting consistent golf in practice for the tournament and on one practice jaunt included an ace with a wood on a 194 yard hole for good measure. She met one of the golfing sisters from Chicago Miss June Beebe, who qualified with an 87.

Mrs. Edith Begg, Cleveland youngster who won her place in the set 32 only after a 3-hole playoff, faced a formidable opponent in Mrs. G. W. Tyson, Kansas City, former national and western champion.

Mrs. Melvin Jones, woman's medal play champion from Chicago, who qualified with an 83, still holds the all time record for low qualifying medal in 23 years of woman's world tournaments. In 1927 over Olympia Fields, Chicago, the sturdy Mrs. Jones hung up a 73. She meets an other Chicagoan, Mrs. H. D. Raymond.

Dorothy Page of Madison was paired with Mrs. Leon Solomon Memphis, runner up to Mrs. Hill, in the tournament five years ago. Miss Bernice Wall, Oshkosh drew Florence Beebe of Chicago.

In qualifying yesterday, Miss Page was one of three women to break 80 on the Hill crest course. She made the round in 79. Miss Wall had an 88.

ILLINOIS RACE TRACK BUILDER IS DEAD

Aurora, Ill. — (AP) — Funeral services for Clifford R. Trimble, general manager of the Exposition park race track, will be held here tomorrow.

He died yesterday after being seriously ill since early in the summer. He was 45 years old.

Trimble, perhaps more than any other man, was responsible for the return of racing to Illinois. He first introduced the modified mutual system of wagering at Aurora in 1924 which opened the way for the passage of the Lacey law by the state legislature and the building of three modern race tracks in the Chicago metropolitan district — Washington Park and Lincoln Fields in 1926 and Arlington Park in 1927.

COLONELS MOVE TO MINNEAPOLIS FOR FOUR GAME SERIES

Louisville Has Only 2 1-2 Game Lead After Losing to St. Paul, 3-0

CHICAGO (AP)—Louisville's battered Colonels moved from St. Louis to Minneapolis today, hopeful that the Millers would be more considerate than their sister club.

When the Colonels left St. Paul, the five and one-half game lead which they started on the road, had dwindled to two and one-half over the Saints. Bryan "Slim" Harris pitched great ball yesterday to give St. Paul the final game of the series, 3 to 0. Harris gave the Colonels 10 hits, but fanned eight and received excellent support to allow only two men to get as far as second base.

Minneapolis used the home run method to take two decisions from Indianapolis. Nick Cullop, Miller outfielder, and new homer record holder of the American association, got one in each game to bring his total to 46, while Ernie Smith drove one out of the park in the second game with the bases full, helping the Millers to a 5 to 4 triumph. The Brewers slugged Alex Ferguson justly, getting a home run, three triples, two doubles and a half dozen singles in the first eight innings, but failed to bunt them. Tom Jenkins, Brewer outfielder, had a perfect day at bat, getting a double and three singles in four times at bat.

Columbus scored all its runs in the first three innings to take the final game of the series, 4 to 2 from Kansas City.

BRUINS READY FOR SERIES WITH BUGS

Day of Rest Has Cubs Prepared for Two Game Series at Chicago

Chicago (AP)—After their day of rest, William Wrigley's Cubs had a double aim today as the Pittsburgh Pirates sailed into Chicago to open a two game series.

The first aim was to protect or increase their five-game lead over the New York Giants, and the other was to obtain revenge for the way the Pirates treated them in their last series in Chicago. The Cubs won the first game, but the Corsairs bounced right back and grabbed the next two, thus helping to delay the Bruins' ascent to the top of the National league.

Sheriff Blake was Joe McCarthy's pitching pick for the first game, while Ray Kremer, Pirate ace, who already had three decisions over Chicago, was expected to work for Pittsburgh.

To date the Cubs had a one game edge over Pittsburgh for the season, having won eight out of 15.

UNKNOWN PERSONS KILLED GLOCKE, JURY'S VERDICT

Doctor Testifies Young Man Could Not Have Fired Shot Himself

New London—A coroner's jury meeting in the city hall Monday, heard the testimony of witnesses called by District Attorney L. D. Smith of Waupaca-co and returned the verdict that Henry Glocke, 19, whose body was found in a parked car on a swamp road at Lebanon on July 31, came to his death by a gun shot wound inflicted by person or persons unknown.

The hearing was conducted before Justice Fred A. Archibald.

The first witness called was Fred Lehman, driver of the Verifine Ice Cream Co., truck, who discovered the body. He stated that at first sight he knew that the young man was either ill or dead, so with Kenneth Egan and Chester Paap he returned to the car. He stated that he found the body lying across the seat of a roadster, with the feet resting on the open window opposite, with the arms folded in such a manner as to partially cover the wound directly above the heart. The small pistol was lying at the farthest end of the seat.

Dr. A. C. Borchard testified that when he examined the body he believed the man had been dead several hours, that he did not probe the wound, believing that an inquest should be held, and that in his estimation the shot must have been fired by other than the man himself.

Mrs. Emma Glocke of Synco, mother of the dead man, stated that she had never known him to carry or possess firearms.

SHOT AT BEFORE

Arnold Glocke, an uncle; Ervin Glocke, a brother, and Arnold Dreke, the farmer for whom the young man had last worked, also testified. The latter said that Henry Glocke had been working over being shot at on July 15, when at work in a barley field. He had then asserted that he had two enemies, but Mr. Dreke had not inquired who they were.

Sheriff Arthur Steenbock and Undersheriff James O. Hanson of Waupaca-co testified, the former as to the position of the body, and the latter about the arrest last December of Charles Barkholtz, for the abandonment of his wife and child from his home.

Mr. Hanson said that Barkholtz, at that time made threatening remarks regarding his wife, and that for that reason he had taken him out of town. Barkholtz had for a time worked about Iola and Big Falls.

Others called to the stand were H. A. Voss, undertaker at Manak; Mrs. Deke, Mrs. Amelia Hedke, mother of Mrs. Barkholtz. The latter detailed the threats made by Barkholtz against her daughter, and stated that she was afraid of him "because he had once slapped her with a butcher knife."

Dr. A. Christofferson of Waupaca, who conducted an examination of the bullet, stated that it had entered the center of the heart, and that it would have been physically impossible to have gotten himself into the position in which he was found had he himself held the gun.

Mr. Egan, Barkholtz' divorced wife of Charles Barkholtz, told of her friendship with Glocke, and of her previous difficulties with Barkholtz, his threats regarding her refusal to live with him, and of the later occasion two weeks following the death of Glocke when she was fired upon near Odgensburg. The bullet smashed the windshield of the car in which she was driving.

The jury included Tom Fitzgerald, Bernard Egan, Frank Crain and Mr. Murphy of Lebanon, Fred Lehman of New London and George McDermott of Hortonia.

A NICE GIRL COMES TO TOWN

By Magpie Greig

CHAPTER 13
AUNT ETHELBERTA

MARY LOU awoke with a start at seven o'clock on Sunday morning. She was thankful the sun was shining, for a change, but she shuddered at the thought of what might happen that day.

Tony, however, didn't wake up until three hours later.

"What the devil are you doing letting in all that damned sunlight?" he exploded at Wallis, his man, pulled up the blind.

Wallis, however, was firm.

"May I remind you, sir, that you asked to be called? I believe you are motoring down to lunch with your aunt today."

"Jumping Jehoshaphat!" Tony exclaimed. "I'd forgotten completely. And it's important, too. I'm playing my last card to get Aunt Ethelberta to back my flight."

"Your last card, sir?" Wallis inquired, as he gathered up the clothes Tony had left strewn all over the floor.

Tony grinned.

"And she's a mighty pretty card, too."

Wallis retrieved Tony's trousers from the chandelier.

"If I may say so, sir, all the cards in your pack are good-looking."

"True," Tony admitted, "but this one's the goods."

Meanwhile, in the Jeromes' bedroom, Mary Lou was curled up on one end of the bed, sipping tea between bites of toast. Jay was doing likewise.

"This is your big day, isn't it, Mary Lou?" Jay asked. "The day when Miss Titherington sticks a little ticket on you—will do, or won't it?"

"Pray for the former," Mary Lou sighed. "Tony seems to set great store by my meeting his aunt."

"Why should he worry about what his aunt thinks?" Jerry interposed.

"Auntie is his bank account," Jay explained. "And from all I hear she's mighty particular."

"If I was this fellow Tony I'd see her in—"

"Hush, darling, you don't know a thing about it," Jay retorted. Then, to Mary Lou: "Gray is the right color to wear today, I think. Blondes always look so demure in grey, with just a touch of blue. That should appeal to this persnickety aunt."

"But I haven't anything grey," Mary Lou objected.

"No matter, you can wear that suit of mine. It should fit you perfectly with a little alteration here and there."

Tony, as usual, was half an hour late. He made up for it, however, by his enthusiasm over Mary Lou's appearance.

"Jove, Mary Lou, but you look stunning today!" With a wink, he added, "but not so stunning that you'll knock Aunt Ethelberta in the eye as Gwendolyn did."

Mary Lou and Jay exchanged meaningful glances.

Tony's long blue racing car ate up the miles as they drove toward Surrey.

"Why so quiet, Mary Lou?" Tony asked.

"I—I'm just a bit afraid of meeting your aunt."

"That's absurd. Her ways are a trifle eccentric, but she's a dear at heart. I know you'll hit it off with her."

Yet Mary Lou was awed at the thought of meeting one of the wealthiest women in England. She imagined Miss Titherington's home as an immense establishment, with enormous grounds and an army of servants.

"Here we are," cried Tony as he turned down a lane off the main road.

"Where?"

"They were approaching a secluded, unpretentious structure that appeared to be a gardener's cottage."

"What did you expect—a Buckingham palace?"

He drew the car to a standstill, and opened the door for Mary Lou. No stretch of the imagination could describe the home as more than a cottage.

"Hello, aunt," Tony called cheerily. "Here's the latest, come all the way down for your inspection."

Mary Lou flushed and turned to greet Miss Titherington. Then she received her second surprise.

The spinster was doubled over, working in her rock garden. There was a full six lanky feet of her straightened out. Her face was angular, but her expression was not unkindly. An aged straw hat, frayed at the edges, was perched on the back of tightly coiled grey hair. She wore a battered leather coat and soiled shoes, and her fingers protruded from a pair of dirty gardening gloves.

Miss Titherington gave Mary Lou a brisk nod. "How do?" she jerked out. Her attention immediately reverted to the rock garden.

"I'm having trouble with these gentians," she remarked in a gruff masculine voice. "Done everything in my power for 'em, but they don't seem to thrive."

"Have you tried pressing the roots firmly into the soil and setting small bits of limestone around them?" she suggested.

Miss Titherington turned and looked directly at Mary Lou for the first time since Tony had introduced her.

"Never thought of that," she remarked in a more friendly voice.

"We've had the same experience at home in our rock garden," Mary Lou told her.

"A couple of years ago Dad tried gassing his own seeds as soon as they were ripe, sowing them in once in seed pans in the green house, leaving them for about 18 months, then transplanting them first into little pots, then into the rock garden. But I daresay you know all this."

"I didn't," said Miss Titherington. "Thanks for the tip."

Tony remained silent as he noted his aunt's reception of Mary Lou. So many girls had failed to find favor with Aunt Ethelberta that he almost had given up hope of finding anyone who would satisfy her.

"I'll let things follow their own course today," he thought. "It looks as if Mary Lou may turn the trick. I'll keep mum and see what happens."

"Strange for a town girl to have any ideas on gardening," Miss Titherington remarked as she led them into the house. "Or to have an idea on anything that counts," she added cryptically.

"I was brought up in the country," Mary Lou explained. "We live in Devon. Tending the rock garden is my special job at home. I love gardening."

"Brought up in the country, eh? Then how on earth can you stand living in a horrid stuffy old town?"

"I'm only in town for a visit," Mary Lou hid the regret in her voice.

Miss Titherington gave her another penetrating glance, but she didn't comment. She opened an old oak door and drew the girl inside.

The bedroom was charming. Polished oak beams comprised the main part of the ceiling. Worn and worm eaten, they were, and the boards on the floor sloped dizzily. Mary Lou, who adored old Tudor cottages, was sincere in her enthusiasm.

"The place didn't look much when I first bought it," Miss Titherington told her. "All those beams," she waved a hand ceilingward, "were plastered over. I dug 'em all out and polished 'em myself."

"That makes it ever so much more fun living with them, doesn't it?" Mary Lou said.

"You've sense, child," Miss Titherington said. "How on earth did Tony get hold of you? You're the first girl he's brought down yet who isn't a mess. But," and her brown eyes twinkled, "maybe it was you who got hold of him."

Mary Lou was doubly embarrassed at that remark.

"I—I—I—I—I," she stammered. "Tsk, ts! I didn't mean to embarrass you. I always say what I think. Every girl with sense picks out her man. Men are such babies they would always choose the wrong 'un, if it were left to them. I'd have got hold of one myself long ago if I'd ever seen a man worth crossing the street for."

"Come along," she added abruptly. "Lunch must be ready."

Aunt Ethelberta soon reveals her motive for quizzing Mary Lou. See tomorrow's chapter.

ENGINEERS EXPECT RADICAL CHANGES IN FUTURE AUTOS

Even Now They Are Working on Improvements in Industry

BY ISRAEL KLEIN
Science Editor, NEA Service
Far from being satisfied with the present automobile, engineers in the United States and Europe are devoting much time and study to development of new parts in addition to improvement of what they have today.

From the radiator to the rear axle, from the tires to the top, marked changes may be expected for many years to come. In the research laboratories of large companies and of the various governments, both in America and Europe, engineers are even now experimenting with engines, bodies, springs, transmissions, brakes and their related parts that have yet to enjoy popular favor.

Some of these laboratory outfits would still be considered freakish if suddenly thrown on the market today. Yet the future may see their adoption generally. Such, for example, is a form of compressed air motor and transmission that was described as long as three years ago by H. A. Hayden, independent research engineer, and whom a gathering of members of the Society of Automotive Engineers applauded for the idea.

INSTEAD OF GAS TANK
According to Hayden's plan the engine under the hood would actually be an air compressor, storing air in a tank under the back seat for power when wanted. This power would go through a reciprocating air engine on the rear axle and would be more immediate than could be gathered up by the ordinary gasoline motor.

In Europe all sorts of engines and transmissions are being tried out, far different from the types we have on the roads. There's an engine with a horizontal rotary valve arrangement that eliminates many parts, is said to be quieter, cheaper and more durable than the present poppet-valve or even the sleeve-valve motor.

Single sleeve-valve engines have been in use for many years, and for quite some time an American company has been considering introducing this type of motor in America. Its advantages are said to lie in its utter simplicity, its fewer parts and its supposedly greater dependability.

TWO MOTORS IN GEAR
While in Europe certain efforts are being made toward development of a dual type of many-cylindered engine, in America the tendency is either toward the straight-line motor or the V-type 12 or 16-cylinder engine. The dual engine is actually two separate motors, each with its own crankshaft, but both united by gearing to a single propeller shaft. The V-type motor, however, has a single crankshaft.

Just as the front-wheel drive, after years of experimentation, is finally being adopted for popular use, these and other laboratory developments may also see the light. In fact, the front drive itself may force the introduction of an entirely new type of engine for its special purpose, besides new methods of springing and body design.

"Free-wheeling," just introduced by one of the larger companies in America, is a different kind of control of speed and high gears without use of the clutch, and at any speed.

In England, a concern building a high-priced car has gone a step farther and made it possible to shift through all gears without touching the clutch pedal. The device is called a "fluid flywheel" coupled with a "self-changing" transmission.

AUTOMATIC CLUTCH
Further to make it easy for the driver, and another English invention, is the automatic clutch control, a device that would throw the clutch in and out, as gears are to be changed, at the proper time and in just the right way, all without the least effort on the part of the driver.

In England, the old type friction driver car, by which the differential consists of one disk pressing vertically against another while revolving, instead of meshing gears to gears, has been revived. His same car also introduces rear-engine design, which has been taken up by other European engineers.

By adoption of the rear-engine drive, the engineers say they have more direct drive, eliminating the drive shaft, and permit of a roomier body suspended equally between the axles.

SPRINGS AND BRAKES, TOO
Besides these operating developments there are such problems as braking and springing to which engineers are giving considerable thought. When these are done there will still be the problems of efficient body design, of improvement in engine chassis and body materials, and of many other

What Scientists Are Learning Eclipse Will Be Studied From South Pacific Isle

San Francisco — (AP) — A total eclipse of the sun, to last approximately 30 seconds October 21, will draw a group of American astronomers nearly 4,000 miles to a speck in the Pacific called Niuafoou Island. The expedition, headed by Dr. S. A. Mitchell, director of the Leander McCormick observatory of the University of Virginia, plans to sail from San Francisco in September. The project is sponsored by the United States naval observatory.

The minute and one-third when the light body of the sun will be completely shut off by the moon from the earth's sight will be virtually 60 times as long as the period of "totality" for which other astronomers have prepared in the past. Niuafoou belongs to the Tonga group of islands, lying just below the equator. It was discovered in 1891, and for a time bore the name of "Proby" Island.

Slightly more than three miles square, the island rises abruptly to a fairly uniform height of nearly 600 feet. It is of volcanic origin. A study of all phases of the eclipse is planned by the expedition. Niuafoou was chosen as the site for study because it is the only stretch of land on which the shadow path of total eclipse will fall.

To South sea mariners Niuafoou is known as "Tin Can" Island because mail ships cannot approach it except by throwing overboard in tin cans or other receptacles.

TESTS WITH RATS
FAIL TO SUPPORT
EVOLUTION "PROP"
Flagstaff, Ariz. — (AP) — One of the minor grips of the evolution theory, called the Lamarckian factor, is considerably bent by experiments at the Museum of Northern Arizona.

This Lamarckian factor holds in effect that man loses what he does by use. It says: "In every animal which has not exceeded its term of development, the more frequent and sustained use of any organ, develops and enlarges it and gives it strength proportional to the length of time of such use."

"Constant lack of use imperceptibly weakens it, causing it to become reduced, and ends in its disappearance." To test this contention Harold S. Colton, amputated the forelegs of very young albino rats and their descendants for six generations.

In a report to the southwestern division of the American Association for the Advancement of Science he says there was no demonstrable change in the lost bones of the last generation over those of the first.

"Therefore," he says, "this experiment contributes no evidence supporting the Lamarckian factor in evolution."

TIME, SPACE LINKED IN NEW SOUND THEORY
New York — (AP) — Space and time are linked in a theory of hearing advanced in a report to the Acoustical Society of America by its president, Dr. Harvey Fletcher.

In hearing, some scientists have held that time of the vibrations was the important factor. Others have considered the pattern of the sound waves make in space as the distinguishing difference between sounds.

Some sound waves are long and smooth; others are crowded together closely. Dr. Fletcher shows how both the time and space components are impressed on the membranes of the inner ear and concludes that "space-time" is the way to account for the effects.

BETTER RAT-CHASING CATS BRED IN FRANCE
Le Havre, France — (AP) — Pussy is more efficient than science in rat-catching.

Dr. A. Loir, nephew of Pasteur, prefers cats to chemicals and gas in chasing rodents. He plans soon to establish a cat farm to develop breeds that will take "mousing" seriously and make it their life work.

For four years Dr. Loir has been selecting breeds. His project is backed by scientific societies and warehouse and shipping interests, which have suffered heavy losses from rats.

details that go into the construction of an automobile. For example, new body shapes are being tested in a wind tunnel of one of the country's laboratories in order to determine which would be least resistant to wind pressure, thereby affording greater power and economy to the motor, and yet conform to reasonable standards of beauty in design. As a result of these tests we may yet be riding in egg-shaped automobiles, if our esthetic senses will permit.

The chassis itself may in the future be eliminated and the entire body may become a unit with engine and wheels. The radiator may also change its aspect. Even the gasoline motor may become either a Diesel-type of oil-burning engine, or a mere generator for electric drive cars.

INVESTMENT MART APPEARS LAUNCHED ON EXPECTED RISE

Demand for High Grade Bonds Last Week Almost Insatiable

BY PRESTON S. KRECKER
Copyright, 1930, By Cons. Press
New York — (CPA) — An apparently insatiable demand for high-grade bonds last week suggests that perhaps the market for investments has been launched on its long-expected rise. Not a day passed during that period without seeing several railroad or public utility issues register new high record quotations for the year. Moreover, the average price of representative bonds was advanced to the highest level in nearly two years.

The buying of gilt-edged corporation bonds has been the distinguishing feature of the bond market this year. It reflects a complete reaction from the perversive investment habits of the previous year. It would seem that investors now want to be doubly sure of their principal and income, whereas last year they were more concerned with unover profits sought through hand-out operations in the market. The reversion to pure types of bonds has been attended by an almost complete substitution of interest in convertible and other stock privilege issues.

CONVERTIBLES DROP
The convertible bond last year contributed far the largest percentage of dealings in listed bonds, and this year little attention is paid to it.

The switch away from speculative issues to straight investments is one more indication of the passing of the so-called "new era" financial theories and the return to old-fashioned ideas regarding financing. In other words the gambling spirit, which a year ago had infected even the bond market, has faded out.

The decline in the volume of new financing presumably has had something to do with the strength of the market for seasoned issues. Volume this month has been less than $150,000,000, a total often exceeded in one active week. The fact is there is diminished demand for new capital, owing to the slump in general business.

Statistics on new issues for the first seven months of the year show that the decline in financing done for account of domestic corporations has been very marked this year. During the seven months under review, the total volume of stocks and bonds issued to meet new capital requirements of American companies was $3,653,000,000, it is estimated. That compares with a total of $4,973,000,000 during the corresponding seven months of last year. The decrease amounted to 25 per cent.

NEW FINANCING LARGE
In spite of that diminished demand for new capital on the part of American companies, the total volume of new financing done for the first seven months of this year was only 14 per cent less than that done the first seven of last year, when all records for capital issues were broken. The respective totals were $5,423,000,000 this year against $5,321,000,000 in the seven months period of 1929. That makes the total this year to date the second highest for the period on record. It was 17 per cent greater than the $4,622,000,000 issued in the first seven months of 1928, and about the same per cent above the $4,612,000,000 issued in the 1927 period.

The fact that, despite the decrease of 25 per cent in domestic capital needs, the total volume of new issues for the first seven months of 1930 was less than for the 1929 period is explained by recovery of foreign borrowing powers to the American market in greater numbers than a year ago. The total amount of foreign borrowing to the end of July was $335,000,000 this year against $241,000,000 in the corresponding 1929 period.

PROTEIN FEED HELPS BOOST WOOL OUTPUT

Cannberra, Australia — (AP) — A council of scientific and industrial research appointed by the Australian federal government has discovered a protein preparation which, fed a sheep, substantially increases their wool yield.

When wool fell in price the economic effect to Australia was alarming and the country was faced with the necessity of producing much more wool. It is predicted that the new protein sheep feed will solve the problem.

Fed to 100 sheep over a long period as an experiment, the preparation increased the fleeces by an average of 20 ounces and improved sheep's physical condition.

EARTH'S RUBBER LAND WOULD GIRL GLOBE

New York — (AP) — It takes a lot of land to produce the world's rubber supply. Dr. E. G. Holt says in a report to the American Chemical society that this area would stretch in a band nearly a mile wide around the earth at the equator.

Yet all the rubber produced in 1929 made into a solid ball would be barely 600 feet in diameter.

THE INCREASE WAS ABOUT 40 PER CENT

There is no doubt but that the heavy borrowing by foreign governments and corporations this year is ascribable to the lower interest rates exacted by lenders this year, compared with last.

State and municipal borrowing also has picked up as a result of the more favorable terms obtainable for money. An estimated total of $354,000,000 of municipal bonds was sold in the first seven months of the year, contrasted with $147,000,000 for the corresponding 1929 period, by way of contrast, new financing by investment trusts has almost completely disappeared from the market.

SOCIAL INSURANCE IN CHILE BLOCKS DISCONTENT TIDE

Stops Communistic Propaganda Within Borders of That Nation

BY RODNEY DITCHER

Washington—At a time when veteran viewers-with-alarm are more vocal than usual about the menace of Communistic propaganda, the republic of Chile speaks up and claims to have stopped such propaganda within its borders by the peaceful method of progressive legislation.

A social insurance system for all salaried workers, extended considerably beyond the provisions of Uncle Sam's retirement act for federal employees under which employees and government contribute to a fund used for annuities after retirement from long service, is said to be the panacea which persuades all Chileans to thumb their noses at any overtures from the agents of Moscow.

One-tenth of all salaries paid in Chile goes into compulsory savings, under a law passed to protect public employees, which also covers all private workers whose work is more intellectual than physical. Five per cent of the "white-collar" worker's weekly earnings are deposited every month in the retirement fund by the employee himself and an equal amount is deposited by the employer. Employment is put on a basis of contract and special courts operate to settle disputes arising from such contracts.

EMPLOYEES GET BONUSES.

Other provisions of the law are similar to social insurance laws passed or planned by Soviet Russia and other Socialistic governments. Industrial and commercial establishments must set aside at least 20 per cent of each year's net profits for employees' bonuses.

A legal eight-hour working day is established and employees are indemnified for dismissal without just cause.

All employees between 18 and 50 years old must carry life insurance policies, with few exceptions.

Illness does not make an employee lose his job. He receives full salary for the first month of disability, 75 per cent for the second, 50 per cent for the third and 25 per cent for the fourth.

Women are allowed a month off with full pay before childbirth and another month after childbirth.

Employees completing 30 years of service or reaching the age of 50 are entitled to withdraw their retirement savings.

One per cent of the interest accruing to the bank which administers the retirement fund is applied to a medical aid fund, which now amounts to about $250,000. The bank at the end of 1929 had 77,000 members and funds of more than $12,000,000.

"The effects of this law are incalculable," says the magazine Chile, which describes the workings of it in the current issue. "Socially, it nips in the bud all ideas associated with communistic propaganda; economically, it creates compulsory savings equal to one-tenth the salaries paid in the republic; ethically, it dignifies the employee who up until the date of its promulgation had been subject to the caprice of his employer; at the same time stabilizing the future of millions of Chileans through the creation of obligatory life insurance and retirement funds."

The law was vigorously combated, it is explained, but today its value is generally accepted.

Chile says: "When discontent was rife a decade ago, strong but futile efforts were made to organize the middle classes into a political body. Then came extreme radical agitation and political upheavals. Finally, the present law, which, coupled with better political and economic conditions, has performed what was expected of it. Its basic principles have proved sound. It has brought stabilization and has given the employee a sense of security he did not possess before."

FIREMEN FEAST

London — Fire! And firemen of Bishop's Waltham Fire Brigade dashed off to Admiral J. W. Carrington's workshop to put out the blaze. There they found a blaze lapping around a bin in the workshop. Extinguishing it, they found nearly 300 newly picked eggs which the fire had "hard-boiled." So they had hard-boiled eggs for tea.

Noah's Landing Place Becomes Battlefield

Washington, D. C. — Mt. Ararat, Christendom's most famous peak, where, according to the Biblical narrative, humanity had its second start after Noah landed his Ark, has become the world's most recent battlefield. News dispatches tell of clashes on the flanks of Ararat between Turkish forces and Kurdish raiders from across the Persian border. The mountain is the subject of a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"Because of the wars of the past century, Mt. Ararat has been a sort of fugitive mountain," says the bulletin. "It has not moved as Mohammed would have had his mountain move, but its change of jurisdiction has been just as effective by the simpler device of shifting boundary lines."

AT MEETING PLACE
"Before 1878 Ararat was shared by Turkey and Persia, with the main peak, Greater Ararat, in Turkish territory; and the smaller eminence, Lesser Ararat, six miles to the southeast, marking the Persian-Turkish border. Then came a further southern advance of Russia that made the Ararat mountain mass a three-way boundary mark."

From that time until the World War the mountain marked the southern boundary of Russia. During the war the Muscovite line surged back and forth over Ararat, only the Persian border remaining fixed.

"The treaty of Sevres, signed in 1920, which attempted to fix the status of Turkey and adjoining territories, created an Armenian Republic which included Ararat and pushed the Turkish boundary approximately 100 miles to the south. But the same year the Turks pushed the boundary back even beyond the point established in 1878, placing Greater Ararat entirely under Turkish sovereignty. This has been the status of the mountain since that time.

"Ararat, capped with eternal snow, has a certain austere beauty from a distance; but on close inspection it discloses little to endear it to a beholder as 'the mother of the world,' as Armenians have called it. Owing to its peculiarly porous structure the water from its melting snow is swallowed up and does not produce a rill or torrent to water the lower slopes and near-by plains. This is in striking contrast to other mountains of the general region."

"Today the slopes of Ararat are arid. A certain amount of herbage exists during the rainy season up to an altitude of 12,500 feet. Between that point and the snow line at 14,300 feet the peak is bare. The total altitude of Greater Ararat is 16,740 feet, and that of Lesser Ararat, 11,680 feet. Sheep graze on the lower slopes during the moist season; but when the dry season sets in and the sun beats down glaringly, everything is parched and the mountain becomes uninhabitable. Even the birds leave.

"Ararat is difficult to climb and for ages the Armenians asserted that it was supernaturally guarded to prevent any man from gaining its summit. When it was first scaled in 1820 by Parrot, the Armenians insisted that he was lying. A number of mountain climbers have since reached the top and in 1850 a Russian engineer passed five days there making triangulation observations.

"The mountain is volcanic and had an eruption of considerable magnitude in 1840 from an old crater on the side. The village of Arguri with 2,000 inhabitants, on the lowest slopes, was destroyed. The Armenians looked upon Arguri as 'the oldest village in the world,' asserting that it was founded when Noah planted a grape vine there. Vines did not find their first resting place over-hospitable. In the vicinity of Ararat they must be buried each winter to protect them from the extreme cold.

"The name Ararat, supposedly of Aramaean origin, means 'supereminence.' To the Armenians the mountain is Masis, meaning 'sublime.' The Turkish name is Agri-dagh, or 'steep mountain.' The Persians alone bear out the Hebrew and Christian tradition. To them the peak is Koh-i-Nuh, 'Noah's Mount.'

"Armenians, Kurds, and Tatars live around Ararat. In the past the mountain was the center of a large Armenian population. Now most of the Armenians have been pushed beyond the Arax River, about 15 miles north of Ararat, which marks the Russian boundary. The Kurds are scattered, but are in considerable concentration to the eastward across the Persian border.

"North of the Arax River, a short distance from Ararat, is one of Asia's strange lesser mountains—Mt. Kulpi, a mountain of solid salt. This shares in the Noah legend; it is asserted that there Noah obtained the needed savor for his food. This salt mine has been longer worked, probably, than any other outside China. In abandoned workings obedient hammers and other tools of the Stone Age have been found."

OAKLAND OFFICIAL TO PICK STREET NAMES

Oakland, Calif.—(AP)—New names for new streets or old thoroughfares is Charles N. Brier's job. In the last eight years he has named, or renamed, most of Oakland's 2,000 streets.

Eventually, he says, every one of the city's 190 men killed in the world war will be honored by having a street named after him. Brier is busy re-numbering a large part of West Oakland as a result of street expansion.
